House Passes OPA Bill; Kills Cotton, Oil Provisos

Measure Voted With GOP Support; Goes to Conference With Restrictions

By Robert C. Albright

House Administration forces with Republican support yesterday passed a one-year extension of the stabilization law stripped of key cotton and oil price-lifting amendments that would have meant certain veto.

But the Administration victory was not complete. Remaining in the bill as it was passed and sped to conference was many an OPA restriction sealed there in a House week of price revolt. Ranking committeemen predicted most of these will come out of the bill in conference.

Before passing the bill, the House in a tenth inning turnabout reversed its recent approval of the Disney amendment lifting the price of crude oil a minimum of 35 cents a barrel. The oil amendment knockout came on a 204 to 178 roll call vote.

Bankhead Amendment Killed

Earlier, by vote of 191 to 87, the House turned thumbs down on the so-called Bankhead-Brown amendment. This amendment, already approved by the Senate, would have tied textile price ceilings to parity prices for raw cotton, and guaranteed millers manufacturing costs plus a reasonable profit.

What the House approved in its place was an amendment actually penalizing processors of cotton or any other farm commodity if they fail to pay parity prices to farmers.

This last minute proposal, advanced by Representative Stephen Pace (D., a.), required miller and other processors to pay parity for the raw farm product, or accept a 10 per cent cut in OPA price ceilings on their manufactured commodity. Pace said it would apply not only to cotton, but any farm goods selling below parity, such as wheat, rye, peanuts and eggs. He argued that OPA ceilings are already predicated on parity payments to farmers.

Dirksen Amendment Kept

No Administration attempt was made to remove this from the bill, but Democratic leaders made one other bill's end fight and lost. A roll call was ordered on the Dirksen amendment, opening OPA orders to review by the Federal courts, a change they contend will play hob with price control. On this recount, the House refused to back down. The Dirksen amendment was retained in the bill, 206 to 181.

Two Parachuting U.S. Airmen Found Haven in Vatican

Vatican City, June 14 (AP).—Nineteen Allied soldiers and prisoners of war obtained refuge in Vatican City from the start of the war to the Allied capture of Rome, Archbishop Gustavo Testa, who has headed Vatican activities for prisoners, said today.

Two were Americans from a bomber shot down over Viterbo three months ago. Descending by parachute, they made their way to Rome and climbed the Vatican's walls at night. They were released when the Fifth Army arrived.

Among others who got into the Vatican was Lieut. Paul Freyberg, son of the commander of New Zealand troops in Italy.

Destroyers Sink Three Nazi Vessels Off French Coast

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Thursday), June 15 (AP).—Two Allied destroyers intercepted seven German mine sweepers off the coast of France early yesterday and sank three of them and seriously damaged the other four, supreme headquarters announced today.

The communique said the Polish destroyer Piorun and the British destroyer Ashanti intercepted the enemy vessels west of Minquiers Rock and "of the seven, three were observed to sink, and one was seen to receive such damage that its survival is considered unlikely. Of the remaining three, two were left stopped and burning fiercely."

In another engagement yesterday northeast of Cap de Le Hague, the communique said, light Allied coastal attacked three enemy patrol boats, hitting one with a torpedo and setting the second on fire.

McKellar Riders Lose Again

Amendment Gives Congress Check on TVA Finances

By Mary Spargo

Senate conferees on the Independent Offices bill yesterday abandoned the McKellar amendments stripping the Tennessee Valley Authority of its revolving fund and requiring Senate confirmation of all Federal employes drawing $4500 a year or more.

Representatives of both Houses agreed on a compromise amendment requiring TVA to give a thorough report of its receipts and expenditures every four months to both House and Senate Appropriations Committees.

Senator Kenneth McKellar, author of both the Senate amendments, joined in support of the substitute, conferees said.

Proponents of McKellar's amendment requiring TVA to turn its receipts into the Treasury and receive its appropriations direct from Congress believe the compromise amendment may lead to such action after Congress has studied the financial reports.

Opponents of the proposal to deprive TVA of its revolving fund disagreed with that opinion but saw no objection to requiring a full report to both houses of Congress.

The Senate had added both TVA riders after the House passed the bill. House opposition to both McKellar proposals led to insistence on the part of its conferees that they be withdrawn.

Last year the House refused to support a Senate proposal similar to the $4500 job confirmation plan, which was freely called a "patronage grab."

McKellar has bitterly critized Chairman David E. Lilienthal of TVA's board of directors.

Colonel Drunk When Japs Hit, Report Says

German-Born Contractor Criticized for Delay In Pearl Harbor Defense

By the Associated Press

The colonel in charge and the German-born contractor on defenses at Pearl Harbor were criticized yesterday by the House Military Committee for delays which, a report said, left the installations incomplete and the way open for the Japanese.

While the work fell behind, the committee said, Col. Theodore Wyman, jr., of the Army Engineers, accepted lavish entertainment from the contractor, Hans Wilhelm Rohl, in parties that involved liquor "by the case" and "cheap, commercial party girls."

It said the colonel was at Rohl's home in Hawaii when the Japanese struck Pearl Harbor, and that he rushed to his office "in civilian clothes and in a drunken condition."

"How did it so happen," the committee asked, "that after nearly thirty years without taking the steps necessary to becoming a citizen, although meantime enjoying the fruits of Government contracts, he (Rohl) suddenly began using every possible effort to become naturalized in order that he might be permitted to go to Hawaii just a little less than three months before the attack on Pearl Harbor?"

Rohl was naturalized in September and the Japanese hit Pearl Harbor in December.

Rohl Issues Statement

Referring to the award to Rohl's company of some 125 million dollars in contracts which included work in Hawaii and construction of a Far Eastern air route by way of Christmas Island, Canton, Nandi, New Caledonia and Australia, the committee commented:

"It is exceedingly difficult . . . to comprehend how, at so crucial a time and when the necessity for the utmost secrecy and highest efficiency was paramount. . . . a man known to be a German alien was selected and actually put in charge of the planning, specifica-

Baruch Spurs WPB, Congress On Conversion

Financier Tells Of Need for Action In Letter to Byrnes

By Ben W. Gilbert

Bernard M. Baruch was revealed yesterday as the sparkplug behind current activity on the reconversion front as a month-old letter to War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes in which he chided the WPB and Congress for inaction was released.

The letter, signed by Baruch, 73-year-old financier, and his associate, John Hancock, acting head of the Contract Termination Board, reviewed progress that had been made in carrying out the recommendations in their February 15 report on War and Postwar Adjustment Policies.

"We think we should inform you that while much has been done in carrying out the program recommended by us and approved by you, on some matters of importance, administrative or legislative action still is lacking," the Baruch letter said.

"Let Us Hurry"

"For the good of all of us, but mostly for the sake of our soldiers and sailors, let us hurry, hurry, hurry, not only in winning the war, but in being ready for the peace. Delays jeopardize both these objectives.

"The Nation still is months away from being prepared to meet the great adjustments that will come on that unknown X-Day when one of our enemies is defeated. Further delays and inactions can only make our readiness ever more distant and will turn the adventure in prosperity that lies within our grasp into an adventure in adversity.

"The concern expressed in this letter should not be taken as reflecting any speculation as to an early end of the war. The collapse of the Axis in Europe, according to present outlook, should permit the demobilization of a substantial part of our armed forces and a good part of war industry. If this transition is to be handled without

Below Quota Needs!

$6,900,000 War Bonds Bought In District in First Two Days

Individuals in the District purchased $6,900,000 worth of war bonds on Monday and Tuesday as the Fifth War Loan campaign got underway, but a 10 per cent increase in sales is necessary if the 107 million-dollar Washington quota is to be topped by the end of two weeks, it was announced yesterday by the District war finance committee.

Of the two-day total, $5,300,000 were invested in Series E bonds, representing an increase over the amount sold in the same time for the Fourth War Loan. The increase is not enough to match the higher quota assigned to the District in the present drive however, Chairman John A. Reilly of the war finance committee, warned.

Meanwhile national bond sales to individuals during the first two days of the drive totaled 484 million dollars, approximately eight per cent of the six billion dollar quota, it was announced yesterday by the Treasury Department.

Employes of the Federal Reserve Board reached 110 per cent of their $54,000 quota on the first day of the drive, it was reported yesterday. The 442 workers purchased $15,500 worth of bonds in excess of payroll deduction commitments.

Largest sale reported yesterday was made by Frederick P. H. Siddons, vice president of the American Security & Trust Co., who received an Eastern Airlines check for $350,000 worth of war bonds from C. A. Tehan, the airline's district manager.

Columnist Marquis Childs will address a Kiawanis Club bond meeting at 12:30 p. m. today in the Mayflower Hotel, and Austin F. Canfield, attorney, will speak at a furniture group rally at Mayer & Co., 419 7th st. nw., at 11:30 a. m.

Vast Stores Of Nazi Food Taken in Italy

Orbetello Falls; Yanks Seize Road Junction, Engage Strong Forces

Rome, June 14 (AP).—American forces driving up the Tyrrhenean coast of Italy have captured Orbetello, center of German resistance to the Fifth Army's offensive, and gained control of the enemy's immense food supply dumps on the nearby Orbetello Peninsula (Mount Argentario), field dispatches disclosed tonight.

A story filed from Orbetello said the whole mountainous peninsula with tremendous hidden stores of food had come under Allied control. Allied headquarters said the junction of coastal Highway 1 and lateral Highway 74, 4½ miles north of Orbetello along the coast, also had been captured.

The Americans were pressing forward and engaging a strong force of Nazis in the hills north of the road junction, the dispatch said.

The food discovered in bunkers included nearly 300 tons of flour, hundreds of cases of ham, rations and biscuits.

Two Towns Captured

Bagno Regio, 6 miles south of Orvieto, was captured by the Fifth Army and Narni, an important road junction southwest of Terni, was taken by the Eighth Army.

Considerable German rearguard resistance was developing at Terni, but British forces were making a determined effort to break into the strategic communications center on Highway 3. However, Terni's fall was believed imminent.

Orvieto, another important road junction northeast of Lake Bolsena, also was believed near capture.

Inland from Orbetello. Allied forces steadily slugged their way up both the eastern and western shores of Lake Bolsena, advancing 4 miles beyond Valentino and capturing the town of Latera on the western side and closing in on Bolsena at the lake's northeastern tip. The Nazis had rallied and made a strong stand in Bolsena since Sunday.

60 Miles From Rome

Eighth Army columns driving northward from Rome up both banks of the Tiber River closed on Narni, 43 miles above the capital, and sent armored spearheads north of Magliano. Headquarters said some Eighth Army units had reached points 60 miles from Rome, but did not specify where.

It was estimated by Brig. Gen. Gordon P. Saville, chief of the Twelfth Tactical Air Command, that 70 per cent of all German transport seen north of Rome in the past 10 days either had been destroyed or damaged. He said a partial count on main roads showed that more than 3000 enemy vehicles were destroyed in the first 30 days of the Allied offensive.

28 Jap Planes Downed on Biak And Over Palau

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Thursday) June 15 (AP).—Twenty-eight Japanese airplanes were shot down over Biak Island off Dutch New Guinea and over Palau in the Carolines, southwest pacific headquarters announced today.

The enemy attack upon Biak, where newly captured Mokmer has been put into operation for American warplanes, indicated again Japanese interest in preventing use of that base for attack upon the Philippines, 830 miles to the west.

Radio Performer Holds 7-Vote Lead Over Sen. Clark

Boise, Idaho, June 14 (AP).—Glen H. Taylor of Pocatello, former cowboy radio entertainer, regained the lead in Idaho's red hot Democratic Senatorial nomination race tonight with 9977 votes in 705 of 845 precincts compared with 9970 for Senator D. Worth Clark. James H. Hawley of Boice was third with 9048.

Clark often has voted against the Administration on important legislation.

Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen won the Republican Senatorial nomination by a margin of nearly 2 to 1 over Ben Johnson of Preston, a political newcomer.

Fleet Stabs To 600 Miles Of Jap Coast

Powerful Force Follows Up Heavy Carrier Attacks On Pacific Bases

Pearl Harbor, June 14 (INS).—Shattering bombardment of Jap strongholds in the Marianas Islands, 1500 miles south of Tokyo, and the Kuriles, 1000 miles northeast of the Jap capital, by powerful United States naval forces was announced today.

Saipan and Tinian Islands in the Marianas were blasted Tuesday by a Pacific fleet task force which included battleships, cruisers and destroyers. The bombardment came after three days of devastating plane bombings and gave rise to speculation that the smash was a prelude to invasion.

A second task force turned a withering fire on Matsuwa Island in the Kuriles, less than 600 miles from the Japanese mainland while planes bombed Shimushu and Paramushiru Islands to the north. The blows possibly were of a diversionary nature in support of the Marianas bombardment.

Closest Penetration

The penetration of the waters off Matsuwa was believed the deepest made into the Jap inner defense arc by American surface ships.

The communique said large fires were started in Tanapag harbor and in the towns of Garapan and Chara-Kanoa.

No American warships were damaged.

The bold assault on the Marianas was launched last Saturday by swarms of carrier-based planes which sunk 13 Jap ships, damaged 16 and destroyed 141 enemy warplanes in three days.

Long-Sustained Assault

Carried into the fourth day by the hail of shells from the warships, the attack was the longest sustained assault in the central Pacific by American forces since the invasion of the Marshall Islands and, combined with the blow at the Kuriles, demonstrated the tremendous United States naval power now available.

Guam, former American possession captured by the Japs early in the war, Saipan, Tinian and Rota Islands were targets of the first attacks.

Today's communique revealed that still a fifth base in the Marianas—Pagan Island—also was blasted June 12.

The communique also announced that 60 Jap survivors of a ship bombed northwest of Saipan June 11 had been made prisoners.

Pearl Harbor Blast Kills 27; 100 Missing

The Navy announced last night that 27 men were killed, 100 are missing and 380 were wounded in an explosion that destroyed several small landing craft in Pearl Harbor, May 21.

At the same time it reported that a magazine at the ammunition depot on Oahu Island exploded last Sunday, killing three men. Seven others are missing as a result of this accident.

The explosion among landing craft in Pearl Harbor was reported previously by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander in chief, who said that it occurred while ammunition was being unloaded from one of the small craft.

The casualties caused by the explosion and subsequent fire were: Dead—Army 8, Navy 9, Marine Corps 10; missing—Army 53, Navy 21, Coast Guard 26; injured—Army 56, Navy 143, Coast Guard 3, Marine Corps 159, and civilians 19.

In the explosion last Sunday, the Pacific Fleet headquarters said, several torpedo warheads being transferred from a truck to a platform were detonated. Damage was caused in the general magazine area and minor damage was done to power lines and railroad tracks. Names of the three men killed and the seven missing are being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Report Here Charges De Gaulle Barred Officers From Allies

'Incredible,' Says Aide; Causing of Friction Denied

London, June 14 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle landed on the Normandy beachhead behind the lines of the Allied armies of liberation today and a De Gaullist spokesman insisted the French were not to blame for a shortage of liaison officers in the liberated beachhead area.

It was understood in London that De Gaulle crossed the Channel on the French destroyer La Combattante.

A Washington report that the French leader had suddenly canceled orders for several hundred French officers to land with the first waves in the invasion was described by his press attache as "most incredible" because, he said, no agreement had been reached.

"It Is Not Our Fault"

"As to reports that cooperation between the French population and the Allied armies had been impaired—that is quite possible, but it is not our fault," he said.

De Gaulle was accompanied by French army and navy staff officers, it was learned, and they were welcomed by British officers of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's headquarters.

From the beachhead, the general toured liberated towns and villages.

A De Gaulle authority said the trip was made with the approval of

Leader Described As Refusing Help To Landing Forces

By John M. Hightower

Associated Press Staff Writer

Gen. Charles de Gaulle is flatly refusing cooperation asked by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, high authorities said yesterday, and just before the liberation of Normandy began canceled orders for several hundred French officers to accompany Allied troops.

In fact, British-American relations with De Gaulle have gone downhill steadily, in the opinion of military and diplomatic experts here, since the French leader arrived in London 10 days ago to seek a more prominent place in Allied councils.

Highly placed officials say that prospects for a successful conference here between the chief of the French National Committee and President Roosevelt late this month or in July are getting dimmer by the hour.

French Officers Barred

The cooperation Eisenhower asked and De Gaulle refused is concerned with problems of relations between British and American armies and the people of France.

But the key piece in the French leader's conduct to date, it is said, was his decision in the final critical hours before the assault to let no more than 20 specially trained French officers take part.

Between 300 and 500 officers had been trained to act as liaison be-

'Mere Preview' to Nazis

Reds Sweep Toward Viipuri, Topple 8 Finn Strongpoints

London, June 14 (AP).—Russian armor swarming with infantry was reported racing through an ever-widening gap in the Finns' second defense line across the Karelian Isthmus today and was believed to have swept within about 25 miles of Viipuri, Finland's second largest city.

At least eight more strongpoints were captured by the Red Army in continued advances along the Isthmus, the Soviet command announced in its communique, while the Red Air Force in another spurt of heavy bombings attacked German airdromes at Brest-Litovsk, Bialystok, Pinsk, Minsk, Bobruisk and Orsha, behind the Nazi lines on the Eastern Front, destroying "many German planes" and setting fuel and ammunition dumps afire.

Moscow reported that Russian forces plunging through the Viipuri highway sector were knocking out an intricate network of steel and granite gun emplacements and many antitank traps. This tricky defense area is served by a recently built railway running south from the old Mannerheim Line.

Soviet authorities said that in some areas their tanks were moving with great difficulty, the terrain being a virtual morass.

The Finnish communique said that "fierce enemy attacks" continued in the western and central parts of the Karelian Isthmus, and that all had been repulsed.

The Germans virtually ignored the new Soviet assault on their ally, apparently regarding it as a mere preview of the main show about to open on the Eastern Front. A Nazi commentator said tonight that "both the German and Soviet commands are stepping up the rhythm of their preparations for the great clash that is imminent." He said the Russians had piled up great stocks of war materials along the lower Dnestr and that Soviet troops were flowing toward the front southwest of Gomel.

Yanks Lose Montebourg To Ferocious Counterblow

Troan, Caumont Also Fall to Foe; Carentan Held By U. S. Division

BULLETIN

Allied Supreme Headquarters, London (Thursday), June 15 (U.P.). Late last night Allied headquarters relinquished claims to three towns, which earlier had been reported captured: Mounteburg, 14 miles south of Cherbourg; Troarn, six miles east of Caen, and Caumont, 13 miles south of Bayeux.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Thursday), June 15 (INS).—The important strongpoint of Tilly-sur-Seulles has been recaptured by counter-attacking German troops on the French invasion front, it was admitted early today at Supreme Allied Headquarters.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Thursday), June 15 (AP).—Ferocious battles roared at both ends of the Allied lines in Normandy today, with the Germans pressing constant heavy counterattacks, against which the British-Canadian forces stood firm in the Tilly-Caen area but which cost the Americans their hold on Montebourg on the Cherbourg Peninsula.

In the center of the zigzag 100-mile beachhead, the Americans repulsed a German attack on Carentan, and the Allies generally advanced southward, it was announced.

The Germans have thrown at least two fresh armored divisions—making a total of four—into five successive counterattacks in the 20-mile stretch from Troarn on the east through Caen and Tilly-sur-Seulles in what headquarters described in its midnight communique as "a furious attempt to stem our advance."

Allies "Holding Firm"

The Allies there, however, are "holding firm and vigorously searching out weak points" in the enemy attacks, headquarters stated.

Tilly-sur-Seulles was believed to be in German hands, but fighting there was fluctuating, and the British apparently retained command of high ground around the town.

Troarn had changed hands several times and was reported largely held by the Germans. An Allied spokesman said street fighting was continuing there.

Farther west, the Germans attacked viciously at Carentan, key rail, highway and canal floodgate hub at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, but were met head-on and fought to a stand-still by the Americans.

The Americans brought up tanks to fire point-blank on German paratroopers at Carentan, and then pushed forward themselves in hand-to-hand fighting, and gained control of high ground south of the town, Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead reported in a dispatch sent from the Carentan front late Wednesday night.

Foe Tries to Split Yanks

He said the Germans attacked along the Vire River in an attempt to split the American bridgehead and isolate the Cherbourg peninsula from the Allied forces farther east. It was the first enemy attack in force in that area.

The over-all balance on the battlefront was still tipped in the Allied favor, with the mightiest daylight aerial onslaught in history—10,000 or more sorties—directed against the whole German western reinforcement system. Large forces of medium and light bombers blasted the battle area yesterday

New Channel Blows Predicted by Nazis

War Sidelights

Lorelei Lured U. S. Troops, Shot Them

London, June 14 (U.P.).—A German Lorelei who lured American soldiers with smiles and then shot them as they approached, has been captured and brought to England, Allied Expeditionary Force headquarters announced today.

The woman sniper, captured at St. Mere Eglise, said she was 29 years old and of Polish nationality, and that she had been "cooking" for the Germans. Other civilian prisoners in the group shunned her.

A special guard, consisting of an American corporal, who stood watch over her with an automatic rifle, was told to be "very wary of this prisoner."

Art Treasures Saved

Rome, June 14 (U.P.).—The art treasures of the Monte Cassino Abbey, which it had been feared were destroyed when the Allies bombarded the ancient monastery to oust barricaded Nazi troops, were today revealed to be safely stored in Vatican City.

At a press conference today Vatican authorities disclosed that prior to the bombardment, the Germans packed up all movable art objects and brought them to Rome in trucks. They were eventually delivered to the Vatican for safekeeping and now are in the Castello San Angelo, the Holy City's ancient fortress, it was said.

Pope Blesses Churchill

Rome, June 14 (U.P.).—Maj. Randolph Churchill, son of the British Prime Minister, received the Apostolic blessing for himself and his father during his audience with Pope Pius XII yesterday, it was learned today. Until his trip here Churchill, a liaison officer, was attached to Marshal Tito's Partisan headquarters in Yugoslavia.

Nazi Prisoners Tricky

With British Forces in France, June 12 (Delayed) (AP).—Notes from a battle diary:

German prisoners on the western front have to be watched almost as carefully as Japanese in the Pacific.

Three British soldiers and a photographer were standing in a doorway watching a column of Nazi captives passing through a village late yesterday. Suddenly there was a violent explosion. All four were killed. One of the German prisoners had tossed a hand grenade which he had somehow managed to hide.

Poles Aid Abbey

By the United Press

The Vatican radio announced yesterday that Polish soldiers, who "entered Rome as worthy Christian knights" after driving the Germans from Monte Cassino, had collected 600,000,000 lire to help rebuild the ruined Cassino Abbey.

(At pre-war exchange rates the collection would total about $30,000,000.)

tween the troops and the civilian population. These plans, officials here said, had been worked out in detail w ithrepresentatives of the French National Committee in accordance with long understood arrangements.

De Gaulle arrived in London two days before D-Day and sought recognition for the French Committee as provisional government of metropolitan France. When he found British and American policy against recognition, it is reported he sudenly canceled the orders of the liaison officers.

Reports reaching here said members of the general staff finally prevailed on him, however, to let 20 make the trip.

Disclosure of this incident, described here as impairing Eisenhower's position in dealing with the French population, came at a tense moment in Allied-French relations. Prime Minister Winston Churchill declined in Parliament, London dispatches said, to debate the French question, declaring that "it would do more harm than good now."

At the same time Churchill took a more hopeful view of future relations with the committee than could be found in well-informed quarters here. He said he would not seek to delay the debate, "if it had no hopes of a better solution than I can announce at the present time."

President Roosevelt apparently contemplates no change in this country's policy against recognition of the committee unless the people of France, once given the chance, express their preference for it as their government.

Church Influence Grows in China

Methodist Bishop W. Y. Chen of Chungking said last night that Christianity is steadily growing in influence in China.

"China never bofer had such large Christian forces," he said at the Washington Methodist Union retreat at Foundry Methodist Church, adding that in the Central government most of the important offices are held by Christians.

He viewed the Sino-Japanese war as a struggle "between Christian idealism and Japenese Shintoism," between democracy and imperialism, and between right and might."

Havre Bombarded, Says Foe's Report Of Allied Activity

London, June 14 (AP).—German propagandists tonight forecast "important new events" on the Atlantic Coast within 48 hours, reported limited U. S. gains on the Carentan Front, and said huge Nazi reserves were being rushed up for an imminent major battle at Caumont and Villers-Bocage, south of Bayeux.

Their radios said Allied fleet movements in the Channel and activity in English ports indicated new blows were coming, and a Berlin DNB broadcast reported Le Havre was bombarded by "superheavy" Allied naval guns.

Havre Attack Forecast

Other German broadcasts predicted an Allied drive to take this great port on the Seine Estuary.

Berlin said "it is admitted that the town of Tilly-sur-Seulles is not in German hands." The town, southeast of Bayeux, has changed hands several times.

American gains west of Carentan were described by the Berlin radio as "a surprise blow by the First United States Army, which forded a river and gained ground in a drive west." The Americans were said to have "punched two wedges" into the German lines here after fighting of "unprecedented violence." Berlin said the Americans were receiving reinforcements for a new leap forward.

The Germans declared Field Marshal Gen. Rudolf Karl von Rundstedt had switched strong reserves to engage Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commanding Allied ground forces, at Caumont and Villers.

Some Berlin broadcasts interpreted increased Allied pressure around Caen as a bid to open the way for a push east toward Le-Havre.

Foe Claims Stab at Allies

The high command communique said that a German armored force penetrated the beachhead east of the Orne River, and inflicted heavy losses on the Allies.

Reports from Stockholm quoted the Germans as saying the Allies now had landed from 440,000 to 480,000 men in Normandy.

In Berlin, the correspondent of the newspaper Aftonbladet said the people were asking "Where is Rommel?"—the marshal in charge of German ground forces who reportedly has quarreled with Rundstedt—and were jokingly reviving the World War phrase "all quiet on the Western Front."

Reports from the Spanish border said the German command was alarmed by reports that the Allies were landing commandos and rangers, complete with jeeps, light tanks and antitank guns, at air fields prepared by patriots deep within France, and jeeps and tanks had been seen at Plateau Millevaches and Limousin.

It was believed at supreme headquarters that the French leader, under sentence of death passed by the Vichy overnment for his work abroad in the last four years, went to his homeland to offer help in smoothing relations between the Allies and the French people.

unnecessary unemployment, without further inflation and chaotic confusion, the Government must be ready for the swiftiest action, regardless of when the X-Day of Germany's defeat falls."

Armed Services Are Ready

The letter stated that the armed services have been ready to proceed on development of an X-Day plan and on planning of cutbacks, but that no action has been taken by the War Production Board.

Since preparation of the Baruch letter, however, WPB has set up a special reconversion staff to handle cutbacks and the timing of contract termination. A directive from Byrnes to the procurement services provided that no cutbacks could be put into effect without clearance with the WPB. Byrnes, in testimony before a Senate military subcommittee, also revealed that the services will be ready within 30 days to advise manufacturers of the type of cutback they can expect on X-Day.

Unless an X-Day plan is ready, the letter said, "such chaos and confusion could result as to seriously obstruct the final victorious offensives against Japan."

Legislation Still Lacking

With respect to Congress, the letter pointed out that more than 20,000 contracts have been terminated, without any basic legislation on the books. Legislation to permit direct settlements with subcontractors, provision for "T" loans to carry contractors over the interim period while awaiting settlement, financing aids to small business through Federal Reserve Banks and the Smaller War Plants Corp., extension of expiring war powers, development of a postwar housing program and a postwar tax law, were called for in the report, but have not been provided, Baruch pointed out.

The letter praised Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of retraining and reemployment for proceeding "sympathetically and with progress" with his part of the job, and commented that Will L. Clayton, surplus property administrator was proceeding "aggressively."

Truck Drivers In Central States Vote to Strike

Chicago, June 14 (U.P.).—The Central States Drivers Council announced today that most of 26,000 over-the-road truck drivers in 12 Mid-Western States have voted in favor of a strike in an attempt to enforce a War Labor Board directive granting them a seven-cent-hourly wage increase.

Drexter Lewis, director of the Driver's Council, said a meeting of the council's executive board would be held this week to set a strike date.

"The strike will be called within 30 days," Lewis said.

He said 98 per cent of the 26,000 drivers participating in the strike ballot had voted in favor of the walkout. The council is composed of 250 local AFL teamsters unions in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, and Kansas.

20 Boys Depart to Help Harvest War Crops in Virginia

Twenty Washington and nearby Virginia youngsters, most of them about 14, left yesterday to spend their vacations working on Virginia farms in Dinwiddie, Lunenberg and Charlotte Counties, near Richmond, where, at $5 to $12 a week in pay plus room and board, they will help in critically-needed harvesting.

Permission from school principals and parents, based on satisfactory scholastic records, enabled the boys to leave their studies a full week before school closes officially.

Three hundred more boys, from 14½ to 17, will be needed in the next month on Maryland and Virginia farms, according to J. W. Jones of the United States Extension Service. Information may be obtained at 501 K st. nw., or District 7000, extension 378.

The boys who left yesterday, in the care of B. M. Hummel, State emergency farm recruitment officer for Virginia, are:

Bradford Drawbaugh, 1704 Irving st. nw.; Francis Smith, 1139 Abbey pl. ne.; Gene Abernathy, 6603 Potomac dr., Brookmont, Md.; Alfred Ceballos, 2841 13th st. nw.; Richard Ross, 934 New York ave. nw.; Simon Fowler, 4804 Emerson st., Hyattsville, Md.; Ashby and Marvin Ball of Riverdale, Md.; Jack Kliesert, 816 North Wakefield st., Arlington, Va.; Everett Lamers, 2260 Fort Myer, Va.; Paul Caton, 642 K st. ne.

Ted Parsen, Craig Thompson, Morgan Upton, Robert Downey, Lewis Heisler, Norris Rutherford, Danny Dudley, Robert Calhoun and Eddie Crane were among the group from Alexandria and other nearby Virginia counties.

WAR

and 1500 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators—the greatest single bombing force of the war—hit strategic targets behind the German lines.

The Allies have captured German airfields in France, it was disclosed today, but are not using them yet because they were too badly damaged by Allied bombs. The exact number of fields taken was not disclosed.

Americans Hanging On

Despite the loss of Montebourg, the Americans were declared by headquarters to be holding firmly onto positions on both sides of that Cherboug peninsular town.

In the 20-mile cauldron between Troarn on the east and Tilly-sur-Seulles on the west the Germans poured four armored divisions—twice as many as formerly—against the British-Canadian forward line, but failed to gain appreciably.

In a supreme effort, these four armored divisions launched attack after attack across the smouldering ruins of those that had gone before, but Allied Twenty-first Army Group headquarters declared the Allies still held the initiative on the ninth day of the invasion and pointed out that the enemy had been unable to offer the general massive counterattack which had been expected earlier.

"The enemy is fighting our battle instead of his own," the Army Ground Headquarters announced.

Loss Is Counterbalanced

On the northwest of the bridgehead line, the loss of Montebourg held for the Fourth American Division, was admitted, but the loss was counterbalanced by continuing American gains southwest of Le Ham, 2 miles southwest of Montebourg.

Equally strong German blows failed to break the American Twenty-ninth Division's gains west of Carnetan, road-rail hub at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, where the German radio acknowledged that the Americans had advanced several miles and taken several villages. With six divisions officially disclosed to be in action, the American Army under LIeut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley was the largest thrown into a single battle since 1918. (The Twenty-Ninth Division is made up basically of men from Washington, D. C., Maryland and Virginia.)

Along the southern bulge of the battlefront, from the Cerisy Forest through the Illy woodlands reaching eastward, the Allies held firm and were credited with some indeterminate gains toward St. Lo, but their advanced patrols gave ground north of Villers-Bocage, 23 miles from the coast.

Allies 20 Miles Inland

The Allies' deepest penetrations were slightly more than 20 miles inland in the hills east of St. Lo. The situation was too fluid to trace an exact line as rival patrols prodded forward and pulled back repeatedly. The Germans said St. Lo was in flames.

The two armored divisions previously there have ben tied down because the British and Canadians have fully engaged the supporting German infantry.

As explained at Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's headquarters, this meant that much of the German armor had been forced to play the unaccustomed role of digging in and hanging on, rather than punching as planned. This situation, which has operated against the Germans from the start, was declared to have grown worse, due to heavily damaged communications which have delayed the arrival of German infantry reserves to take over the ground-holding job.

Arrival of the two new armored divisions might give the Germans enoug hstriking power to disengage the other two long enough for a counterattack in strength.

German artillery several times has attempted to form for offensive maneuver in the Caen area but front dispatches said each time it had been scattered by British commandos and Canadian and British artillery and infantry.

tions and performance of the contract. . .

"It is not simply a matter of conjecture . . . that had the permanent aircraft warning stations (at Pearl Harbor) been operating on December 7, 1941, the approach of the Japanese planes would have been detected."

In Los Angeles, where he still is in business, Rohl issued a statement through his attorney saying that an official report May 17, 1944, by Lieut. Gen. Richardson, commanding at Pearl Harbor, "completely exonerates me."

War Department Silent

The War Department had nothing to say immediately, but last September 2, Secretary Stimson at a press conference called the association of the colonel and the contractor "inappropriate." He added, however, that the award of the contracts "was not the result of favoritism "and that Wyman's actions with reference to Hawaiian contractors were "the result of honest decisions."

The Secretary said "appropriate action already has been taken" on the basis of an investigation by the Army's Inspector General. He said Wyman was "not found guilty of negligence" but the inquiry had shown "a lack of proper attention to organization and detail," and it was decided to assign Wyman to duties other than large public works.

The committee's censure was applied also to Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short, commanding general at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and to other Army personnel who did not complain against the contractor's failure to comply with the contract. The aircraft warning contract, awarded December 20, 1940, called for completion in six months, but had not been finished when the Japanese flew in at the end of the year, the committee said.

Wyman Overseas Now

Chairman May (D., Ky.), who filed the report, told reporters that "the next move is up to the War Department."

Colonel Wyman, according to the report, now is stationed overseas, presumably in Europe.

The committee said this further about Rohl:

He was "in some degre associated with" Werner Plack, who was connected with the German consulate at Los Angeles and who later went to Japan and thence to Germany. He "bragged of close acquaintance with all visiting German diplomats and persons of high rank."

Wallace Urges Freeing Asiatic Subject Races

New York, June 14 (AP).—Vice President Wallace tonight advocated postwas freedom for Asia's "subject and colonial" peoples and called upon the United States to take "a positive progressive policy toward this area."

Concerning Japan, he said it should be occupied for a time, but not indefinitely, and that it should become eventually an "Asiatic Sweden," specializing in nonwarlike pursuits of high technological skill.

Wallace expressed his views in an article written shortly before he left on his recent trip to China.

He said it was not the mission of the United States "to write declarations of independence for the colonies of other powers," and added.

"Nor is it our mission to underwrite other people's declarations of continued empire."

(Prime Minister Churchill said on November 10, 1942: "I have no become the King's first minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire."

"While the British and Dutch governments and the French Committee of National Liberation have given evidence that they recognize the need of revising their colonial policies in the direction of a larger measure of self-government, there are also in these countries powerful forces which will fight for the old system of empire," Wallace continued.

He said it was important for America to adopt a progressive policy toward Asia "not only because of our interest in and special relations with the Philippines and any other Pacific islands where we may have naval and air bases, but because in southeast Asia there are conflicting forces in operation which have in them seeds of future wars."

Anti-Bridges Move Expected At CIO Session

A sharp attack on Harry Bridges, left wing leader of the CIO Longshoremen's Union and CIO California director, by more conservative CIO leaders is likely to occur at tomorrow's meeting here of the CIO executive board on the basis of advance blasts from conservative spokesmen.

Bridges is under fire for three recent actions:

1. His advocacy of extension of the no-strike pledge to cover postwar labor disputes.

2. Failure to support the CIO Retail Clerk's strike at Montgomery Ward's in Chicago.

3. Advocacy of national service legislation until a CIO executive board meeting asked him to reverse himself.

Rapped Publicly

Bridges has been rapped publicly by the CIO Aluminum Workers which have just decided to merge into the steel workers, by the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers headed by John Green, and by R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Automobile Workers. Samuel Wolchok, president of the Retail Clerks, has made it clear that there is no love lost between hi mand Bridges.

Whether the concrete action of removing Bridges as California director, which the Aluminum Workers recommended in a formal resolution, will be taken is expected to depend on the attitude of CIO President Philip Murray who has striven up to now to keep the two warring factions together.

There was some possibility that a showdown might be postponed because tomorrow's meeting is slated to be a point session with directors of the CIO Political Action Committee headed by Sidney Hillman.

To Draft "Platform"

Saturday, the Political Action Committee will hold a formal session to draft a "1944 platform."

Thomas, in a public statement, termed Bridges' proposal to continue the no-strike policy after the war "a ridiculous, defeatist proposal."

"I hope there will be a few strikes after the war," Thomas said. "That will depend on the readiness of management to bargain sincerely and in good faith. For those who refuse to do so, we must have the strike weapon as a final recourse."

The Shpiyard Worer, publication of Green's union, stated that Bridges was "carrying labor's no-strike pledge too far."

The resolution adopted by the aluminum workers charged that Bridges had supported "every reactionary movement by anti-labor forces in this country."

Three Arrested

Alexandria Sues to Open New Street

Plans for extension of North Pitt st., Alexandria, to provide additional access for an expansive apartment project now under construction, has resulted in a suit being filed by City Attorney Joseph M. Pancoast against three occupants of a house which the city engineers' office maintains blocks the right of way.

In Alexandria Civil and Police Court yesterday Judge James Reece Duncan ordered a continuation of the case in which Minnie Green, 34, James Wright, 48, and Helen Wright, 26, Negroes, are charged with unlawfully occupying Pitt st. as a place of abode without having first obtained the consent of the city council.

According to the Code of Virginia, Section 3024, conviction involves a fine for each day of occupancy. Alexandria police arrested the three Negroes Tuesday night.

A spokesman for the city engineer said the house is more than 50 years old, but the street was dedicated in 1815 and it has not been considered necessary until now to extend the thoroughfare. It was pointed out that in 1785 the Virginia Legislature passed a law requiring that persons owning land adjoining the corporate limits of a town must plot their grounds in compliance with the general plan of nearby city streets.

The corporate limits of Alexandria were not extended to include the site of the house at Pitt and Second sts. until 1930, it was said, but the engineer's office maintains individuals cannot hold possession of a street.

House Owner Now Sought ni Still Seizure

Investigators yesterday were attempting to determine the ownership of a house on Telegraph rd. in Fairfax County, one-half-mile from Pohick Episcopal Church, in which a 100-gallon whisky still was found in operation on a raid late Tuesday night by Federal and State authorities.

William E. Howard, 28, and Mae Virginia Shepherd, 22, of Route No. 1, Lorton, were arrested and booked at the Fairfax police station. Both posted $500 cash bond and were immediately released, officers said.

Paul Dove, investigator for the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, who made the raid with M. K. Bryant of the ABC, and Lawrence G. Mitchell and Francis J. Sweeney, investigators for the alcohol tax unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, reported that in addition to the 100-gallon copper still in the basement of the house, the men discovered: 50 gallons of whisky in jars, 14 50-gallon barrels, four 10-gallon kegs, 150 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of rye and a 25-gallon pressure tank.

Alexandria Police Probe Boy's Injury

Police Chief Edgar A. Sims of Alexandria said last night that his department is investigating the circumstances surrounding mysterious injuries suffered by an 11-year-old boy, Joseph W. Kane of 515 North Columbus st., yesterday when he was found in the 500 block of N. Columbus st. with a broken leg and head wounds.

Police had been called to investigate an alleged hit-and-run case, but found that the boy had been removed to the Alexandria Hospital in an automobile driven by an unidentified Negro. The boy's mother, Mrs. Carrie G. Davis had accompanied her son in the car. He was later removed to Garfield Hospital in Washington.

The boy denied being struck by an automobile, and police were investigating the possibility that he may have been riding on the back of an ice truck which had just made a U-turn at the Columbus st. intersection with Pendleton st.

House Democrats Lose Majority in Illinois Election

By the Associated Press

For the first time in 13 years, the Democrats lost Tuesday an actual majority of the House membership, with the election of a Republican in the 19th Illinois district.

The new House lineup became 216 Democrats, 212 Republicans and 4 minor party members. Thus, the Democrats have exactly half the membership, their numbers equalling the Republicans and minor party members combined. There are three vacancies.

The Democrats lost their majority with the election yesterday of Rolla C. McMillen, Decatur, Ill., attorney, to fill the 19th District vacancy caused by the death of William H. Wheat, Republican. No Democrat sought the seat.

Republic Service Gets 60-Day Stay On 'Death Sentence'

Philadelphia, June 14 (AP).—Republic Service Corp.'s application for a year's extension of time in which to comply with "death sentence" provisions of the Holding Company Act was denied today by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Republic was granted a 60-day extension to continue its divestment of Virginia subsidiaries under geographic integration proceedings, and the commission announced that it would wait until the end of this period before instituting court proceedings for the enforcement of the Republic's recapitalization.

On February 19, 1943, the SEC ordered Republic to dispose of its Virginia subsidiaries and recapitalize "on a basis which would cure the unfair and inequitable distribution of voting power and which would accord no participation to the common stock."

"To the present, not a single step has been taken to effect such a recapitalization." The commission said in its opinion.

Since Republic has entered into contracts for the sale of the Virginia subsidiaries, the two-month extension was granted. Holston River Power Co. will be sold to American Gas & Electric Co. and Potomac Edison Power Co. will but the stock of Madison Power Co., Page Power Co., Massanutten Power Corp. and Massanutten Water Corp.

The 10 Pennsylvania subsidiaries may be retained.

$101,000 of War Bonds Bought By Prince Georges Hotel Unit

One hundred and one thousand dollars worth of war bonds sold in a four-hour rally is the record set by the Hotel and Restaurant Owners' Association of Prince Georges County Tuesday night at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club.

The rally was well attended and John S. White, speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, was the auctioneer. A football given by Sid Carroll, manager of the Redskins, brought $10,000 from a buyer who preferred to remain anonymous and White purchased a $5000 bond to get a baseball given by Earl Wynn and a bat donated by George Myatt.

When the sales neared the $100,000 mark, Dr. Martin Kane offered to give a $500 bond to the buyer of a $6000 bond. Denny McCahill took up his offer and brought the sales to the $100,000 goal. Benjamin Kolodin added another $1000 to his bond collection to put the rally over the top.

Personnel from the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. of Hyattsville and the Citizens Bank of Riverdale handled the distribution of bonds. All sales were by cash or check and each of the $101,000 worth of bonds was issued during the rally. No pledges were accepted.

The committee in charge included Charles Pincus, P. B. Dolph, Thomas Long, Edward Smith, J. L. Strickland, Larry Whalen and Denny McCahill.

Allies Hammer Supplies Bound For French Front

A U. S. Fighter-Bomber Base, England, June 14 (U.P.).—Thunderbolt dive-bomber pilots today reported the Germans desperately attempting to transport ammunition and gasoline truck convoys to the front lines in France despite a lack of air cover.

The pilots in this base destroyed at least 18 trucks and 4 staff cars. One said he hit two ammunition trucks, and "when my plane passed above them, exploding bullets popped all around me." A colonel reported sighting 30 German trucks in a convoy attempting to move from La Fleche to Laval.

"I blew up about four trucks and two staff cars," he said. "The trucks caught fire and burned like hell."

German Army Reported Facing Wool Shortage

New York, June 14 (AP).—If the German army is still in the field next winter, its soldiers will face acute personal hardships because of a severe shortage of warm clothing reminiscent of conditions in 1918.

The lack of wool will mean even greater suffering from cold for people in enemy occupied countries, while German civilians wil lrun a close second, wool men said today.

The next international vice president, Edmunson said, "will by necessity be required to assume the responsibilities of international president as that section of the international constitution provides for retirement at the age of 65."

Victories Spur Yanks in Italy, Observer Says

"We're getting the habit of victory and its having a big effect on the spirit of our troops," Col. John R. Ulmer, recently returned from a trip to North Africa, Italy and England, stated yesterday.

A nassociate editor of the Infantry Journal, Colonel Ulmer, went overseas as an observer for the Army Ground Forces and left Italy as the Eighty-fifth and Eighty-eigth Divisions were preparing for their push to join forces with the men on the Anzio beachhead.

"Those two Selective Service divisions were exceptionally well-trained outfits and were really up for teh attack when I left," he said. "From Naples to the front, I saw literally acres and acres of equipment, waiting for the jump-off."

Colonel Ulmer also told how a German soldier at the front in Italy recently won an essay contest gy plagiarizing the work of an American psychological warfare unit.

Liberation Lifts Plant Morale, Nelson Asserts

"The liberation drive into Europe has stimulated worker morale, boosted production and reduced absenteeism and turnover, Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, reported yesterday.

War bond contributions doubled and tripled in some plants and interest in the blood donor campaign increased tremendously, Nelson said, reporting the results of a survey conducted by the WPB Production Drive Headquarters which supervises WPB's management-labor committee program.

Nelson reported a new invasion spirit on the home front "as the tension of waiting and wondering has lifted ,easing workers' nervous strain with consequent benefits to war output."

"Employe morale and production have been stimulated through front line dispatches which mention specific equipment in action, such as landing craft, sky trains, tanks, and planes," Nelson said. "Everywhere, plant workers are confident their products or small parts are now 'in on the invasion' and they are proud of it."

Shuman Hist Mail Ballot Use In Tuesday's Alexandria Voting

Charging that there were "irregularities in the handling of mail ballots" for absentee voters in Tuesday's election for the Alexandria City Council, Aubra N. Shuman, independent candidate from the Second Ward, who was defeated by the three-time councilman, Paul Lyne Delaney, declared yesterday that he will appear before the grand jury of the Alexandria Corporation Court to demand an investigation.

Shuman polled 188 votes to Delaney's 238, a difference of 50 in the count which was supervised by both candidates from the close of the polls at 8:34 p. m. to 11:05 when the result was announced by Richard M. Wright, chief election judge for the Second Ward.

60 Mail Ballots in Question

Stating that he was in the lead in votes cast in person at the polls, Shuman challenged the approximately 60 mail ballots on the ground that a number of the persons submitting them were in the city on election day when they had signed applications declaring their intentions to be out of town.

"I can't contest the whole election, but I believe that out of this disgraceful situation reforms will be brought about. The judges and clerks were completely fair to me, but I am questioning the procedure in the registrar's office," Shuman said.

City Councilman-elect Delaney in a post-election statement declared: "Mr. Shuman's attitude throughout the whole campaign has been vexatious and abusive and was either caused by bad advice or ignorance, and was entirely uncalled for.

"It has been a hard campaign due to various rumors that were circulated by the opposition, a great many of which were not based upon fact."

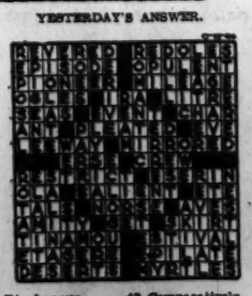
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.



BARNABY — By Crockett Johnson

Barnaby!
Look, Jane! Mr. O'Malley! He's back . . .
Jane! — Your aunt! — She's DISAPPEARED!
VANISHED! Cottage locked up as if she'd left of her own will! Every sign of the violent struggle cleverly obliterated! All the bloodstains removed! . . . I dug up a flower bed and part of the cellar floor, but—
What's he talking about?
So, Barnaby, I was saying, we got this letter from my aunt. She went to Boston.

Comes a thankful wire announcing that the Washington Stage Door Canteen's Saturday night activities, on the grounds of the U. S. Treasury Building, have proved so popular with the servicemen and servicewomen that the ban against uniformed genders dancing together will be lifted. Last Saturday night, it seems, more than 2700 servicemen attended the outdoor canteen and the corps of junior hostesses literally wore out their soles dancing continuously with the GI Joes. By extending the privilege of dancing with the boys to the Wac, Waves, Marines, Spars and other servicewomen, beginning this Saturday night, the Canteen feels that the dance partner shortage problem will be on a fair way toward solution.

The first "adoption" of a Maltese boy at the new children's colony in Malta, operated by the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children, was made early this week by Tallulah Bankhead, noted star of stage, screen and radio, it is announced by Plan headquarters in New York. Miss Bankhead "adopted" Joseph John Lawrence Savona, 9-year-old, whose father was lost at sea early in the war and whose mother was killed during one of the 3380 air attacks on the island. The lad is being taught a trade at the colony and is continuing his education, interrupted during the blitz over Malta. The Plan, incidentally, operates 42 children's projects in England and Malta and is caring for Maltese, Polish, French, Czech, Dutch, Belgian, Austrian, Norwegian, Hungarian, Danish, British, Spanish and German children. A great heart is one of Miss Bankhead's major endowments.

Villain Still Pursues Her

Frist-hand report on the premiere of "Broken Hearts of Broadway," dispatched to this desk from "ringside" opening night, at the New York Music Hall, by Zack Waters, well-known Washington actor and director, indicates that Bibi Osterwald, Natalie Hammond Core and Steve Cochran, all formerly conspicuous in the Capital's amusement scene, have involved themselves in what promises to be a smash hit in the view of Manhattan audiences.

There were, of course, the usual first-night impediments to a perfect performance—like the absence of a necessary amplifying system to carry the voices to all parts of an auditorium that was packed with 2000 people. That deficiency already has been corrected.

Furthermore, Zack seems to feel that despite the fact that Bibi Osterwald was billed as star of the troupe, it really was Natalie Core who "stole the show," even from the villain. Miss Osterwald was cast in a "straight" acting part, until the olio, which was put on last. Once into her own perfected singing specialties, she was a stupendous hit.

The New York Music Hall is described as a perfect setting for the presentation of these old-time tear-jerkers. The premiere was highlighted by 120 Canadian veterans, who paraded from the rear of the op'ry house with the massed flags of the United Nations while the audience stood and sang the National Anthem. Then Washington talent cut loose and made itself felt on East 67th st.

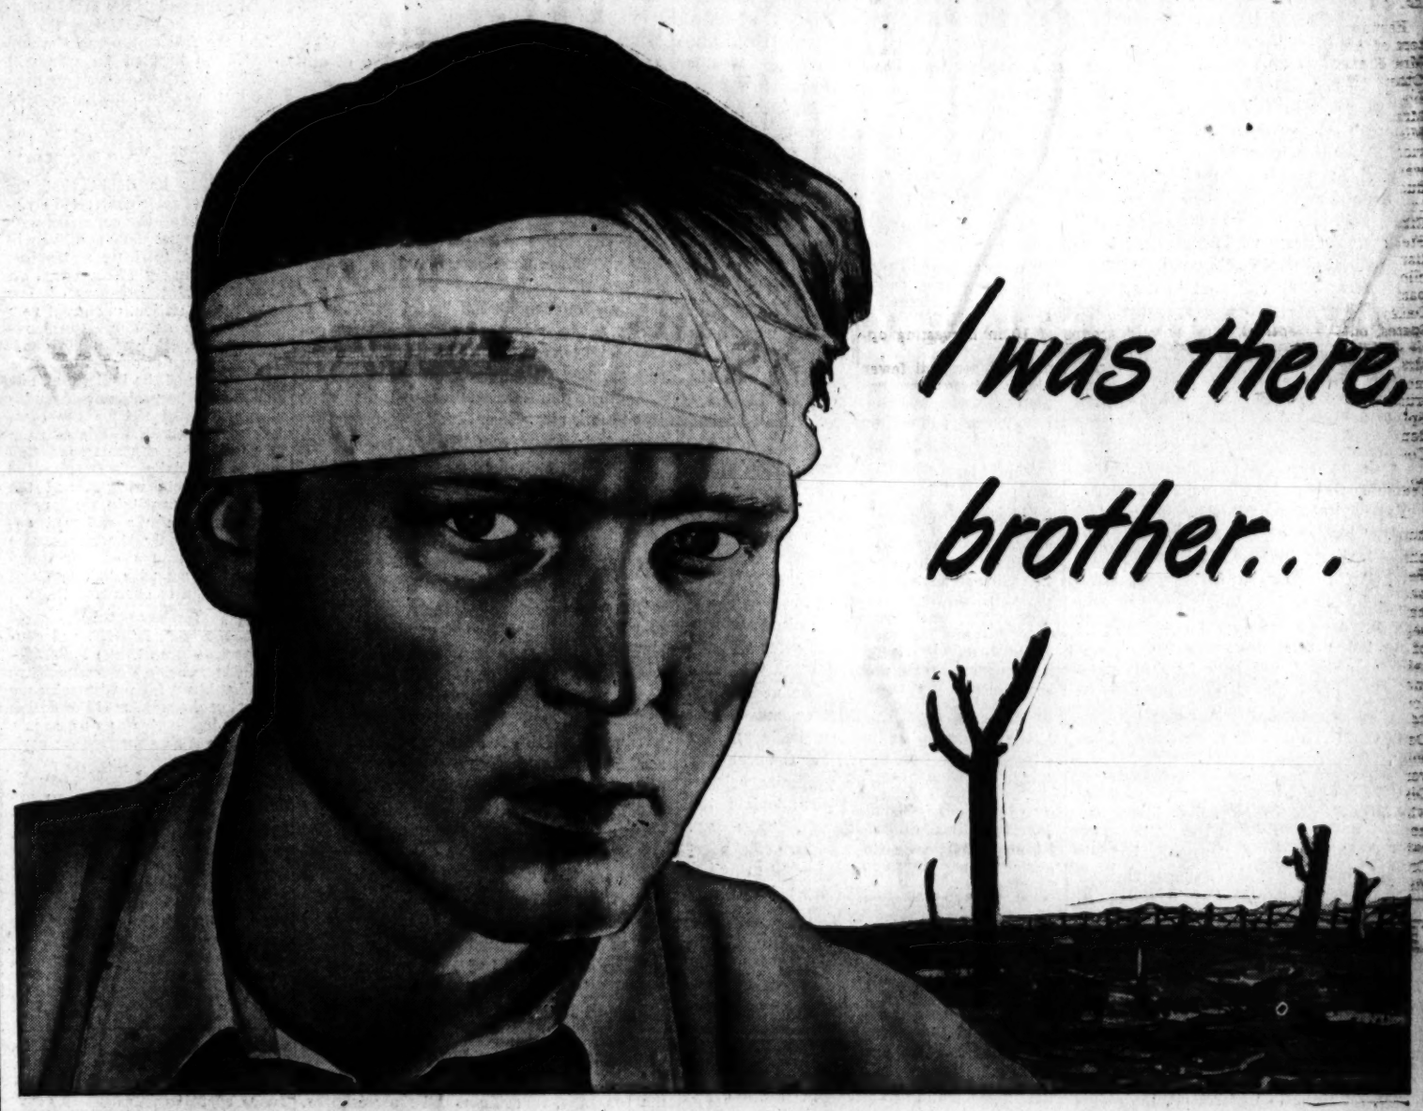
PLUS—FIRST AUTHENTIC INVASION NEWS REEL RELEASE!



YOU SAY YOU'VE SEEN ME BEFORE? I wouldn't be surprised.

Maybe it was at the village green at Lexington. I stood my ground—didn't fire until fired upon—but they meant to have a war, and I let it begin there.

Maybe you've heard of a place called Valley Forge? So have I. It was a tough winter, all right. I should know. Those bleeding footprints in the snow were mine.

Might be that you ran into me on the fields of Gettysburg. They made a speech about me. Maybe you forget what I did there. I was one of the guys who gave that last full measure of devotion.

Yes, I remember the Alamo, too. You see, I held it. 187 Texans against 6000 Mexicans. We never surrendered.

Then it seems there was a little trouble in France. Lafayette, I was there. And how I was there. I turned the ground red with my blood—but when the smoke cleared away, you can guess whose flag was planted on that ground. Look me up, sometime—at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

You think it was somewhere else? Maybe it was. Maybe it was Bataan. Maybe you remember the four months we held out there with practically nothing for ammunition but guts.

Yeah. I was there all right. The Infantry is always there.

That's right, brother. Infantryman. Doughboy. Do-it man. That's me. I'm the guy they mean in the communiques when they say, "John Doe wiped out 3 machine gun nests single-handed." I'm the guy who came off those boats at Salerno. Who held the beachhead at Anzio. Who stormed the coast of Hitler's Fortress Europe.

I'm that thin black line you see weaving through valleys and over crags on that chart where it says, "American troops advanced 10 more miles today."

And when those troops start marching down the streets of Berlin, just keep an eye on me. I'll be in the front row. Look for the crossed rifles on the insignia and the crossed rivers on the map.

See you in the papers, brother. On page 1.

Keep your eye on the infantry ... the doughboy does it!

Undemocratic Spots

The data on voting recently released by the Census Bureau reveal some rather shocking weaknesses in our democratic system. The ballot in some parts of the country is still a comparatively little used device of government. Millions of people who are willing to fight for their country are apparently not willing to take time to cast ballots for representatives and officials who make and execute the Nation's laws. Others are denied the opportunity.

Taking our voting habits as a whole, the record indicates a greater interest in elections since the activities of the Government have greatly expanded. In 1932 only 31.9 per cent of the population voted. By 1936 that percentage had increased to 35.6 and by 1940 to 37.8. The increasing percentage of our population in the upper age groups accounts for part of this gain. Nevertheless, it suggests a widening exercise of the franchise in those parts of the country where popular elections, in the full sense of the term, are held. It is when the record is examined State by State that the deplorable weak spots show up.

Only 5.3 per cent of the people of South Carolina voted in the general election of 1940; only 8.1 per cent in Mississippi and about 10 per cent in Alabama, Arkansas and Georgia. In most of the other Southern States the record is not much better. The one-party system in the South has made it seem scarcely worth while for voters to go to the polls at general elections. Often there is no contest at all and even in the Democratic primaries interest frequently lags. In part, this is because so many voters are disqualified by educational tests, poll taxes and so forth, but a no less important factor is the lack of an organized political opposition.

Even more deplorable than the record of South Carolina is that of the District of Columbia where 632,601 potential voters are deprived of the right of casting a single ballot. Thirteen of the States had fewer potential voters in 1940 than the disfranchised Capital, according to the Census Bureau, and a number of other States had only a few more than the District. Here is by all odds the most inexcusable denial of democratic rights, not only because Washington is the only spot in the country that is wholly disfranchised, but also because Congress could remove the impediment so easily.

Human Element

The great job on the Normandy beaches was done, in the last analysis, through human courage. Masterful planning preceded it. And behind that lay long months of production and transport and training and the assembling of myriad supplies, armor and equipment. But in the end, when the mines and barriers and traps and the coverless stretches of sand confronted the men in the landing boats, they were on their own. Perhaps it is quite impossible for us at home to imagine, let alone to understand, the qualities of mind and spirit which moved these men forward into deadly enemy fire, moved them to overcome the insurmountable, to grasp and hold and expand the quintessential foundation for all that is to come.

From those who witnessed the performance of this job, we know now something of what it entailed. There is cheer in the reports that, on the whole, these landings cost us less in human life than had been feared. In some spots, however, the toll was terrible. And none who went ashore could know what lay in store for him. To some of the witnesses, the achievement seemed superhuman. Ernie Pyle, for instance, reported of the beach on which he landed: "Now that it is over, it seems to me a pure miracle that we ever took the beach at all . . . I want to tell you what the opening of the second front in this one sector entailed, so that you can know and appreciate and forever be humbly grateful to those both dead and alive who did it for you."

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery—whose praise is praise indeed—paid a tribute to the American soldiers which cannot fail to excite pride among all their countrymen. He spoke of one "American" beach where our troops unexpectedly ran into a crack German division on maneuvers. "By the end of the day," he said, "the Americans were not more than 100 yards inland and were hanging on by their eyelids. You can imagine Americans doing that. It was very unpleasant, very tricky. There is no doubt about it that the American troops did absolutely magnificently in recovering from that very unpleasant situation, and today these same troops are miles inland. Very good, very good indeed."

Because our prime interest, naturally enough, is in the American sectors of the invasion, we run some danger of minimizing the no less vital and gallant work of the British and Canadians. Our own correspondents are with our own troops and accordingly tell most about their exploits. A similar situation holds true in respect of our Allies. We should be lamentably ungenerous and ungrateful were we to forget for a moment that this has been, and continues to be, an Allied enterprise. As American troops press toward Cherbourg, British and Canadian soldiers are battling magnificently to take Caen. Certainly one of the inner secrets of our joint success so far has been the complete integration of all these forces in strategical planning and tactical employment. Would that we could integrate our civilian mentality accordingly!

Mr. Byrnes' Plea

Long ago the President should have spurred Congress to deal expeditiously with the Baruch plan for the demobilization of industry. Canada and Britain are all readied for V-Day. Here in this country the legislators continue to procrastinate on a matter which if left much longer unsettled might bring nothing but confusion when the war is over. This was the substance of the warning given the other day to a Senate subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs by Mobilization Director Byrnes. He protested that plans for dealing with reconversion problems are seriously handicapped by the failure of Congress to enact supporting legislation. Contract terminations were not proceeding in a satisfactory way, he said, because procurement officers were in doubt regarding the extent of their authority in the absence of legislative policy rulings. Mr. Byrnes apparently has some hope that contract termination legislation may be approved before Congress takes its convention recess. But, assuming that an agreement on differing contract termination provisions can be reached by House and Senate within the next few days, legislation for disposal of surplus property and for the placement of demobilized civilian warworkers will remain as items of unfinished business.

Mr. Byrnes' specific recommendations for expediting demobilization follow the lines of the Baruch-Hancock report and are in general accord with the opinions expressed in the just-released George report on postwar employment. His primary aim is to provide legislative backing for a program of postwar adjustment that will inspire confidence in all classes—employers, employes, investors and consumers. Mr. Byrnes stated that the WPB was working on a reconversion plan, effective after the defeat of Germany, that assumes a 50 per cent cut in war production. He also indicated that the armed services intend to provide war contractors periodically with estimates of the cuts in outstanding contracts that are to be expected on the cessation of hostilities. Advice in regard to immediate placement of industrial orders in anticipation of resumption of civilian production will likewise be forthcoming.

This sort of executive agency planning, essential though it is, needs to be supplemented by legislation that will encourage industry to go ahead with plans for the future. For example, the report of the special (George) Committee on Postwar Employment stresses the indispensability of giving business assurances that the Government's attitude will be friendly, that the rules of the game will not be constantly changed, and that Congress will not delegate sweeping ill-defined powers to executive agencies. The consumer, who is the customer of American business, likewise needs the moral as well as the economic support derivable from a preliminary legislative program designed to alleviate the hardships of demobilization. Thus Mr. Byrnes' recommendations for immediate formulation of a postwar revenue bill to be applied on the termination of hostilities is aimed at encouraging expanded investment of capital in industry. Similarly his suggestions for liberalized unemployment benefits during the demobilization period are designed to dissipate fears of prolonged unemployment and prevent the kind of buying paralysis that itself produces depression.

We haven't learned a great deal about the way to control fluctuations in business activity, but one thing we do know: remedial measures applied after industrial depression has overtaken us are of limited efficacy and do not inspire the kind of confidence needed to revitalize industry and create jobs. We know, too, that, barring preventive preliminary action, millions of men and women are going to be dismissed following demobilization. If we have to resort to make-work devices of the WPA type to relieve their distress, the resultant social and economic unrest may spell tragedy for this country.

Yugoslav Mystery

The report that Constantine Fotitch, Yugoslav Ambassador to the United States, has been recalled by his government will come as a shock to his many friends and admirers in Washington and throughout the Nation. Lacking the necessary information (since so much of what has been vouchsafed us on this subject has been propaganda and special pleading), Americans are in no position to judge the real merits of the dispute between Marshal Tito, the Partisan leader, and the Yugoslav government-in-exile which is apparently responsible for Dr. Fotitch's recall. Americans, however, cannot forget the signal service which Dr. Fotitch rendered his country and the Allied cause during the dark days of 1940. In those days one Balkan nation after another was submitting to the Axis without a struggle. After the signature of the Yugoslav-German pact of that year it looked, for a time, as if Yugoslavia would go the same way. Had that happened, Hitler would have had free and easy entry into Greece, the final conquest of Greece would undoubtedly have occurred sooner than it did, and Hitler would have been able to move up his Russian time-table by a few precious weeks.

But the Yugoslavs decided to fight. And in coming to that decision the Yugoslavs owe a great deal to Dr. Fotitch, who in Washington carried out an unrelenting fight against the German pact, and was instrumental in bringing about its repudiation. An old soldier who had fought bravely against the Central Powers in the last war, he had no illusions on the subject of what resistance to the Nazis would mean to Yugoslavia. But he was also clear-eyed regarding the ultimate balance of forces in the war and particularly the contribution which the United States was going to make. A stout patriot and a good European is Dr. Fotitch. And his colleagues in the Diplomatic Corps are united in their appraisal of him as a first-class diplomatist, also. The Yugoslav government will be hard put to it to find as able a representative as the present Ambassador has proved himself to be.

UNRRA

When the House of Representatives acted on the appropriation for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, D-Day had not yet dawned. In the light of that great event, the Senate on Tuesday dealt with the agency much more liberally. It approved not only the 450 million dollars appropriated by the House but also the transfer of an additional 350 million dollars from lend-lease which the President had requested and which the House had banned. We trust that when the matter goes to conference the Senate position will be sustained without controversy. UNRRA's needs are now altogether apparent. Its opportunity to begin its vital task may come even sooner than we had hoped. Only through its healing ministrations can the invasion of Europe be transformed truly into a liberation.

UNRRA must begin forward buying now if it is to be ready for the tremendous responsibilities it is pledged to assume. It will have a devastated continent to deal with. Uncounted millions of the war's civilian victims will have to be fed, clothed and sheltered until some semblance of economic stability can be restored. Hordes of men and women driven by the Nazi conqueror to work as labor battalions in Germany will have to be moved back to their homes. And all these people will need tools and machinery and seeds and fertilizer to enable them to begin work anew and to become once more self-sustaining. When the time comes, we must have the means as well as the will to help them.

By giving adequate funds to UNRRA now, Congress can make the promise of American aid real instead of merely verbal. It can add a powerful psychological force to the strength of our armies. During the months just ahead, many members of Congress are likely to be away from Washington. Before they go, they should be quite sure that they have equipped UNRRA for the job assigned to it.

Coming, Mr. Moto

The present concentration of Allied might against the European end of the Axis can afford, at most, only a very wry, transient and uneasy satisfaction to the Japanese. The propagandists at Tokyo voiced the blithest confidence that Hitler's Atlantic Wall could not be breached. It has been breached already. And the Japanese know that as one end of the Axis is pressed back, the other end must be tilted, too. For they have a clear understanding of this paramount central fact—still obscure to some of our obstructionists on Capitol Hill—that this is one war, with one enemy. We have merely chosen, for sound strategic reasons, to strike first at his strongest point.

When that point has been overcome, as President Roosevelt said on Monday evening, we shall be able to "force the Japanese to unconditional surrender or to national suicide much more rapidly than has been thought possible." This is not to say that the job in the Pacific will be a walkover. But it will be enormously simplified. We shall be able to bring to the performance of it the combined naval forces of Britain and the United States, together with the mass Chinese armies already in the field. The Japanese are already reeling from the blows of a mere fraction of this might. They cannot long withstand the whole of it.

No one need suppose that the Pacific has been forgotten. Our eyes at the moment, to be sure, are focused upon the Normandy beaches. But we can see beyond them—to Berlin and to Tokyo. Gallant Americans in planes and submarines and surface ships and on the Netherlands East Indies islands are the vanguard of what is to come. They are holding—and advancing—the line magnificently. They need have no fear that we'll forget them. And the Japanese need have no hope that we'll forget. Just a minute, Mr. Moto. We'll be coming.

THE RABBI

Exalted by the love of God, this man
Goes forth among his friends a gentle king
Too wise to rule. When first I came to stand
Before him, awed at what a sacred thing
It was to be confirmed, I could but think,
How great a man, how tall, how nobly wise,
How finely does he speak, and I did drink
His words and love the splendor of his eyes.

When next we met, I faced him to be wed,
But now I saw he was not great, nor tall,
And I had learned myself the words he said.
But on his face he wore the prayers of all
And in his eyes he bore with sorrowed grace
The deathless patience of his deathless race.

Postwar Economy

IV

THE AMERICAN people believe in a life of enterprise and expansion by individual initiative. But all the talk of a "return" to free enterprise and private initiative is merely an expression of feeling; not a solution of problems. We are not going to return to anything. We must never go backward. We must press on—on to the days of demobilization and the complex economic problems they will bring.

The profound nature of the changes we must face is evident in the trend of affairs in Europe. Russia, with whom we are destined to have progressively closer economic relations, is a completely state-controlled economy. The aftermath of war will see a tremendous rise in Western Europe of state ownership of resources and industries, what we call state socialism. The problem is well illustrated in the question of what is to become of the big industries of France, which the Germans have taken from their former private owners. It is likely that a large portion of this French production will become state-owned.

The trend in Great Britain is becoming increasingly clear. Lord Woolton has just rendered an official report for the British Conservative Party which would take Great Britain far along the path of government control of industry.

THE PLAIN facts are that Europe and Great Britain are moving as they are in economic thinking because of an insistent demand on the art of those millions of men who labor but do not direct. They demand that they shall be protected against the hazards and unpredictable destruction of human values involved in the violent fluctuations of modern industrial life.

We are facing the same situation here in the United States. And the full employment which has been created by war will make the demand for protection against postwar unemployment increasingly insistent. Already, looking to the future, men are asking: Must we have war to have jobs?

There is no doubt that the pressure of state-controlled economies in all of the countries with which we must trade and live will in multiple, intricate and subtle ways inevitably affect our own society. But because of our youth as a nation, our great geographical area, our natural resources, together with the enormous potency of our belief in the possibilities of the individual, our answer to the problems of demobilization will not be the complete controls of Russia or even the elaborate controls suggested for Great Britain. Despite the pressure from without and the demands from within, we have an opportunity for a different answer. But only if we recognize the basic causes of unemployment and act with boldness and imagination to overcome them.

INDUSTRY, LABOR and government—local, State, Federal—should set up a cooperative mechanism which will act as a clearing house for information and constructive programs. Through such a mechanism capital goods expenditures—such as the building of roads, public works, industrial plants—so important a factor in the wide fluctuations of our economic cycle, can be spread and levelled over the years. Plant location and appropriate housing can be rationalized to the end that congestion and distortion in our economic system may be prevented.

But we must be realistic enough to acknowledge that the best efforts of private industry, even supplemented by such intelligent cooperation, will not always be enough. In addition the Federal Government must exercise a counter-cyclical influence against depression in order to preserve a reasonably high level of employment.

Some of the obviously necessary measures to this end are: Direction of the capital market to encourage a flow of new capital when depression threatens and to discourage it in the face of a boom; the undertaking of legitimate Government projects at Government expense, but by private contract, the moment depression sets in—projects, for instance, that will improve the health and welfare of the people, create new markets, new purchasing power; broad social insurances which will both protect the individual and help to stabilize consumer industries and agriculture.

BUT OUR basic answer to the problems of a demobilization economy, and one for which we are peculiarly fitted by temperament and natural circumstances, lies in our great productive ability. Our industry has performed a miracle of production in the goods of war. It waits eagerly to perform the same miracle in the goods of peace. The new automobiles, the new houses, new planes, new plastics, television, new uses for farm crops, new discoveries born of war research, all clamor to be developed. And the markets of the world will be waiting for them—that is if we do our full part to help stabilize the world.

If our industry, however, is to develop its possibilities of postwar production to the best advantage of all, it must have certain releases and certain safeguards. Capital is necessary—risk capital that is ready to take a chance on the future. Because we have failed while we fight to pay for the war to the full extent of our ability through an adequate tax program, it is going to be impossible to have any early general reduction of taxes when the war is over. But there should be a drastic revision of the tax laws to encourage risk capital for new investment and new ventures.

Also, in order that industry may function venturesomely, new and effective methods must be found for counteracting and controlling the tendency toward monopoly and monopolistic prices. They are the Trojan horse of the free enterprise system and in essence a protective device by men and industries who want to escape the hazards and penalties which are the counterpart of the opportunities the system offers.

Under such releases, under such safeguards, our genius for production will go a long way toward solving the problems of a demobilization economy. There will be employment; there will be good wages; there will be goods to buy. There will be better living for all.

Add to this Government's part, in the picture and the sincere cooperation of industry, labor and Government to distribute the strains, and you have the American answer to the problem of a demobilization economy.

The Republican Party cannot meet the need of the postwar period by merely passing resolutions in favor of "free enterprise." It must realize the inevitability and the justness of the people's demand for both protection and opportunity, and it must find the answers, answers which exist uniquely within a responsible enterprise system.

The Discord Grows

By Barnet Nover

France And The United Nations

THE RECOGNITION by the exiled governments of Czechoslovakia, Luxembourg, Belgium and Poland of the French Committee of National Liberation as the Provisional Government of France reflects the widening cleavage between the great powers and the small in the ranks of the United Nations.

In Italy today, on the beaches of Normandy, in the air over Europe, on the sea approaches to that continent, Americans, Englishmen, Canadians, Frenchmen, Belgians, Czechs, Poles, New Zealanders, South Africans and others are fighting together and dying together in a cause that is clearly the cause of them all.

The degree of integration and coordination which the Allies have achieved in the military sphere is remarkable and has no counterpart in history.

But what is true on the battlefields is not true in the council chambers.

CONSIDER the problem of France.

That is a problem which is of concern to every nation on earth but particularly to the nations inhabiting the continent of Europe, to France's immediate neighbors.

Common sense should have dictated that in working out any policy regarding France the views and desires of the European members of the United Nations should have been consulted.

There is no evidence that this was ever done. It was not even done after the creation, as a result of the Moscow conference, of the European advisory committee.

The formulation of Allied policy toward France has remained the self-asserted prerogative of the "Big Three," none of which, as it happens, is exclusively a European power and one of them, the United States, no European power at all.

In actual working out, the "Big Three" monopoly has placed a veto power in the hands of the United States which President Roosevelt has not hesitated to exercise in a manner contrary to the advice of his principal advisers and disturbing to many of even his most ardent admirers.

THE RESULT has been a steady deterioration in our relations with the French Committee at Algiers and a growing schism in the ranks of the United Nations.

Yet neither the American people nor anyone else has ever publicly been vouchsafed a word of explanation by the President as to his French policy. Apparently we are supposed to accept it without question, purely as an act of faith. Yet the French policy of the Administration since the days of the Darlan deal and the Giraud fiasco—to go back no further—does not suggest that such blind faith is wise or justified.

IT IS A PITY that in this matter the sound policy the Administration has pursued in its relations with the nations of Latin America has not been pursued.

On all matters of hemisphere concern the United States has tried whenever and wherever possible to move hand in hand with the other republics. The policy to be pursued by the hemisphere as a whole was fully discussed and agreed upon at the Rio Conference in 1942. We have sought the cooperation of the other American nations regarding the problems created by the upsets in Argentina and Bolivia. We are and plan to continue doing so.

No similar solicitude for the views of other nations, including France's immediate neighbors, has been shown in the matter of the French problem.

THE END RESULT has now been a revolt of some of the smaller European powers, a revolt that is likely to spread as long as the policy of the Big Three remains purely negative.

In fact, Winston Churchill has had to call upon all the power of his immense prestige to prevent the House of Commons from staging a full-dress debate of the problem of British relations with the French Committee.

His position is awkward. On the one hand, he is determined to follow the lead of President Roosevelt on the French issue, no matter what the result. On the other hand, British public opinion is almost unanimous in opposition to the American line.

The fact is that precious months have been allowed to pass by without coming to an agreement on this French problem. This delay has exacerbated tempers at Algiers and elsewhere. For a long time the Algiers committee was fully prepared to be recognized as something less than a provisional government. That was true as late as at the time of Secretary Hull's speech of April 9, in which it was stated that the United States was "disposed" to regard the committee as a governing authority in France during the period preceding the full liberation of that country.

Denied even that limited recognition, the committee has proclaimed itself the Provisional Government of France. It is so being recognized at least by Czechoslovakia, Poland, Luxembourg and Belgium.

Erring Map

The Post for February 25, 1943, published a picture of "the first enlisted soldier in the United States Army to receive the Distinguished Service Cross in this war" with a brief account of his deeds of valor. He is Master Sergt. Anthony Holub of Wink, Tex., who was in the Philippines when the Japs struck, attached to the Nineteenth Bombardment Group. Though officially a citizen of Czechoslovakia he had been in the Army for 15 years before he was naturalized. Thousands of men of Czechoslovak birth or descent are serving in our Army, Navy, and the Air Force. They are Americans. Many more thousands of Czechoslovak exiles and refugees are fighting in other Allied armies. In the Near East there were enough of them to publish a periodical of their own. There are two Czechoslovak brigades in the Russian army, fighting the battles of the United Nations, fighting for their own country as well as ours.

Czechoslovakia has been overrun by the Nazis, but is still existing as a Nation de jure. It is one of the United Nations, one of our Allies. It has an Ambassador in Washington. Hence it seems to me not only wrong but also in very bad taste for your cartographer to publish a map of Europe without any trace of Czechoslovakia as if a peace treaty had already given that unhappy country to Hitler, while he shows Albania, Yugoslavia, Greece, Poland, Belgium, the Netherlands and even Luxembourg as independent countries, though they are under the temporary domination of Hitler in the same way as Czechoslovakia (see map in the Post for June 11, page 1B).

Sailors And Civilians

It is unfortunate that many of our civilian population look upon those Navy men stationed upon shore duty with disdain and disfavor. Civilians, because they are unfamiliar with the science and intricacies of waging a successful war, feel that any sailor not aboard ship is wasting naval funds and is far from being usefully employed. The fact that certain types of work which can best be done on shore and which are of the utmost importance to men aboard ship completely escapes the unthinking sections of the public. Perhaps this condition is more noticeable in an around the Nation's Capital because of the many offices and bureaus of operation which are concentrated in this area.

There are two reasons why such a feeling, existent amongst the citizenry, should be dispelled. First of all it tends to alienate the civilian population from the military and at this time and with this type of conflict taking place it is vitally important that all sections and segments of our Nation work in the closest harmony to defeat any enemy whose past victories were made possible by dividing a people against themselves.

Another reason why this feeling must be destroyed is because it can and often does filter through to those who today are wearing the Navy Blue. This infiltration can create a discontent with the job now being performed by capable bluejackets on shore duty. This is a far from healthy condition. Those men on land bases are placed on such duty because their capabilities and training, received in civilian life, are best utilized in the jobs and work which they are doing.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Limited Service

The Selective Service order stopping the induction of men into the armed forces for limited service is a step toward solution of a major problem in the services—the efficient allocation and use of manpower.

The limited service setup, called "noncombat duty" by the Army and "special assignment" by the Navy, has been a source of widespread irritation to men who fall in these categories, as well as to their families and friends. Many of these men have been yanked out of useful and even important civilian jobs and put into uniform by local draft boards which were hard put to meet their quotas.

Many thousands of these soldiers and sailors are assigned to noncombat jobs which make little or no use of their training and abilities. They joke bitterly among themselves about relieving a Wac or Wave, as the case may be, for active duty.

No one begrudges the military any of the fighting men they may need. But in the limited duty sphere, where further replacements are not apt to be needed, it should now be possible to improve greatly the allocation of manpower in noncombat work.

It is not easy, of course, for the different branches of the service to forecast their manpower needs. Three months or more may elapse while military training is being given, so that when a limited serviceman comes up for assignment the manpower needs at the time of his induction may already have been filled.

The new Selective Service order creating a common pool from which men will be drawn as needed for noncombat duty by all branches of the armed forces will help to avert waste of military manpower. But this is not enough. Mistakes already made should be corrected.

Unused Abilities

Here are a few flagrant cases of misused or unused abilities among men in the Army and Navy which have come to my attention:

A lawyer in the Navy Department who was refused a Navy commission because he could not pass the physical exam was drafted into the Army for limited service. His assignment—chauffering.

The owner-manager of four factories making landing barge parts for the Navy, limited service assignment—typing.

Government statistician, limited service assignment—typing.

Top-notch government lawyer, limited service assignment—messenger work and odd cleaning jobs.

Railroad switchman, three years' experience, limited service assignment—truck driver.

Electrical engineer, three years' experience working for the Army as a civilian on Alaskan airfields, etc., limited service assignment—messenger.

Every one of these men would be more useful to the war effort if he were allowed to resume his civilian work. None would have been drafted under the present draft rules.

Now that the military forces have reached approximately their peak strength, they can afford to take stock and see what use is being made of the abilities they have acquired.

Efficient Use

The war effort would be aided by more efficient use of limited service men. Many of them are anxious to get into jobs now filled by civilians in Government war agencies and would be glad to work at Army rates of pay in order to be of use.

A large proportion of the limited service men who are not being used at the work for which they are trained might well be discharged. This would be especially true if they were released only on condition that they secure and retain jobs in essential war industry. Such a move would certainly be a logical extension of the new rules on the draft.

If these men are to be released it will be necessary to discard the military concept of an essential man—i.e., any man who fills a job that has to be done, even if it's only cleaning latrines—in favor of a new conception of how to make the best use of our manpower. But this would be a most constructive change.

Many limited service assignments are really essential to the war effort, of course. The Navy, for instance, assigns skilled workmen to special duty as carpenters, plumbers, welders and steam fitters. They are certainly needed in these jobs. But among the "special assignment" men in the Navy (and there are 17,000 of them over 30 years old) are all too many who would be far more useful in their former positions.

I submit that it would be better sense to use clerks for clerical work and professionals for professional work, rather than to try to make clerks out of professional men whose talents and training are needed elsewhere.

War Of The Worlds

It has occurred to me that a good term to use for the present war is the War of the Worlds, in contrast to the last war, which was properly known as the World War. The present is a war of the Forward Looking against the Backward Looking world; the world of Democracy (even Russia believes in it) against Despotism; the world of humaneness against ruthlessness; the world of right against might. Leaders have acknowledged that the two worlds cannot live side by side, that they must fight to the death, hence the War of the Worlds.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Scores Quit on Report They'll Be Frozen in Jobs

A report is sweeping Federal agencies that Government workers will be frozen in their jobs after July 1, and it has brought about resignations by the score. It isn't true, and Federal employes shouldn't get too excited. What will happen is this: On July 1, the new War Manpower regulations to stabilize employment will become effective. But you'll still retain the freedom to quit your job. The same rules on releases will apply. However, it'll become increasingly difficult, if not impossible, to get a release to take a job in a nonessential industry. But you can still quit. And if you do, you can be appointed to another Government job after you've been out 30 days after your annual leave has expired, or 60 days if you wish to take a private job. Even if you're given a release, it'll be necessary in most cases to get a referral from the United States Employment Service. You can't escape all this by leaving Washington. The regulations apply Nation-wide.

WAR TRAVELERS: Remember a few months back when all the winter tourists got stuck down in Florida and couldn't get back to their homes? Well, a good number of them, it seems, thought they had pulled a fast one on Uncle Sam by making him provide the transportation and foot the bill, too. It happened this way: Several persons recruiting employes for the War Department here were in Florida at the time, and they promised transportation to Washington to everyone who signed up. Some people said they'd work for the department just to get out of Florida, and when they got here they tried to quit. But they had to repay the railroad fare. The department requires that the people it transports here must serve at least six months.

The other day Douglas B. Maggs, Labor Department solicitor, received a note from Secretary Frances Perkins. He and others in his office studied the handwriting for a moment and finally he picked up the phone to ask the Secretary: "I'm sorry I can't read your handwriting. Does your note say important information?" . . . James Mitchell, former personnel director of Army Service Forces, is now handling labor relations for Macy's, the New York department store . . . William B. Avery, assistant chief of the employe relations branch at the War Department, will resign to become personnel chief for the American Brake Shoe Co. . . . Senator Mead's son has been wounded seriously in Italy . . . The House Civil Service Committee will meet today to decide whether to accept the Senate amendments to the Starnes-Scrugham bill or to send it to conference.

The Senate has voted Maury Maverick, chairman of Smaller War Plants, a raise from $8000 to $10,000 . . . Ernest L. Olrich has been given general supervision of the Procurement Division by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau in place of Assistant Secretary Sullivan who is reported to have submitted his resignation . . . The RFC has the best share-the-car record in the city, averaging five passengers a car. Agriculture is runnerup with 4.2 passengers . . . Census Bureau Recreation Association yesterday presented Director J. C. Capt a service flag with 946 stars, 940 blue and 6 gold . . . The Army has cited a civilian for his work in North Africa. He's Jerome Fanciulli of Foreign Economic Administration, who negotiated a loan of 30,000 tons of wheat from the French in North Africa to help feed our Army and Italian civilians.

BSM COMMUNIQUE: "Time means nothing to the Brotherhood of Sensible Men. Last year, Year 1 of the Revolution, a day of liberation from hot neckties and coats was set. June 15 was the official date, and only a few of the more radical—and more intelligent—brothers ignored it. This year no Zero Day will be observed. Rather, we'll govern ourselves by the thermometer. Nor will any mark be made on the thermometer at which we'll divest ourselves of coats and tight shirts. The deadline will be reached and observed by each individual brother as his own personal temperature dictates. Thus the inauguration of the Brotherhood's sensible program for workers in Washington may be couched simply in these inspiring words: "When it gets hot, Brother, take it off." (Signed) Charles Planck, supreme commander."

That's the signal, men. Any day now you can get into your cool slack suit and go to work. It'll be perfectly all right. The BSM movement started slowly last year but before the summer was out thousands were wearing open-neck shirts to the office and we can expect many more thousands to get sensible this year. The newcomers who haven't yet suffered through one of Washington's torrid summers will soon get the idea. Several top officials are trying to get up courage to apply for membership. Incidentally, BSM has decided to make Vail M. Delony of Lake Providence, La., the No. 1 honorary member. He introduced a bill in the Louisiana Legislature which would make illegal the wearing of coats and ties in the State between June 1 and October 1. He would except only Sundays and weddings. A most sensible man.

Two Inductees Freed in Draft Evasion Case

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—United States Commissioner James K. Cullen today dismissed Federal cases against two inductees charged with making false statements to avoid induction, and took the cases of eight other men under advisement.

Hearings were waived by three of the 16 persons last week by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on charges of conspiring to obtain deferments, counselling prospective inductees in answering questions put by Army psychiatrists, or making false statements to get deferments.

Army Trio Accused

Three Army men attached to the Fifth Regiment Armory Induction Center were among those accused.

United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn, in a reply to a defense attorney, termed the case as one of the worst in his experience.

Cullen said he considered the cases against the inductees "not so serious," but that the interference by Army and Navy men outsiders in the draft processes, "which means, of course, interference with the progress of the present war," is an action which "grates on the nerves of any patriotic citizen."

The cases against Argus Farmer, 22, and Harry S. Morganstein, 35, both of Baltimore, were dismissed.

Those who waived hearings before the commissioner were Mrs. Florence Wheeley, Engene C. Hofman, jr., and Harry J. Dasch, jr. Hearings for John H. Bowen, jr., and William B. Denny were set for later this week.

Eight Cases Weighed

The eight cases held for consideration include those of Chief Petty Officer Chester T. Ruby, Corpl. Morris Molofsky, Sergt. Leon D. Shapiro, Charles W. Herzog, Arthur C. Yost, Basil J. Jeffers, Roland L. Zimmerman and James C. Rupprecht. C. Karl Martin of Hagerstown, was held for grand jury action following a hearing yesterday.

Mrs. Katherine Scott testified that Martin offered to obtain a deferment for her brother for $550, advising him to take a stimulant to induce illness and postpone induction until he could raise the money. Mrs. Scott told the commissioner that her brother did not do so and was inducted. Martin failed to get him a medical discharge as he subsequently offered, she said.

The servicemen charged are Chester D. Shapiro and Corpl. Morris Molofsky, all assigned to the Baltimore induction station.

Rabies Wave Ebbs in State

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—The year-old rabies epidemic in Maryland is on the decline and prospects are that quarantine regulations will be dropped in some sections, State Health Department officials said today.

State epidemiologist Dr. C. H. Halliday disclosed there had been no cases of rabid animals reported for three weeks. The last was a dog in Baltimore County which had bitten five persons.

Quarantine regulations are levied and enforced by the State Department of Agriculture. They are put in force usually for 90-day periods, after which time they either are renewed or allowed to lapse depending on incidence of the disease.

In May, a department report showed, 284 persons had been reported to the pasteur division as having been bitten by dogs, three by cats, four by rats, one by a monkey and one by a snake. Of this group, 54 received the pasteur treatment. The persons reported bitten came largely from Baltimore City, Baltimore and Anne Arundel Counties.

In Anne Arundel County from May, 1943, through April, 1944, there were 262 dog bites reported to the county health officer. In May, 1944, there were 67. No rabid dogs were reported in 1943, while three were found this year.

Prince Georges County showed a total of 111 rabid animals for the year ended May 31, while Montgomery County reported 53 rabid animals between September 24, 1943, and June 5, 1944.

No deaths were reported in Maryland. Dr. Halliday said there may be other cases of rabid animals reported periodically, but that the back of the epidemic appeared to have been broken.

Annapolis Plans Tax On Slot Machines

Annapolis, Md., June 14 (AP).—The Annapolis city council has ordered the drafting of an ordinance levying license fees on consoles, pinball and claw machines and similar amusement devices in the city.

Henry Tarantino, city counselor, pointed out that the last Legislature passed a law covering licensing the machines in Anne Arundel County, but excluding Annapolis. He explained that if the city passed an ordinance carrying the same license fees as the county law, it would bring in about $10,000 a year in revenue.

Mayor William U. McCready has called a special council meeting for June 2 to act on the ordinance, in order to make it effective on July 1.

Front Royal Airport Committee Named

Front Royal, Va., June 14 (AP).—The Front Royal Town Council has taken an initial step toward establishing an airport near here by appointing a committee to investigate possible sites for such an enterprise.

The committee is composed of L. B. Dutrow, town manager; T. S. Duncan, councilman, and William C. Armstrong, jr., town attorney.

County Units Named to Help War Veterans

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—Governor O'Conor's office announced today the personnel of 11 county committees named to help returning servicemen.

Eventually, the office said, a veterans' advisory committee will be set up in each county, with a large committee for Baltimore.

Walter F. Perkins, vice president and general manager of the Bartlett-Hayward division of the Koppers Company, is general chairman of the State organization.

The committees named by the Governor included:

Anne Arundel County—D. Claude Handy, Carey Meredith, Charles Carlton and R. Edward Dove, all of Annapolis; Oscar Grimes, Davidsonville.

Frederick County—Richard F. Kline and Robert E. L. Putman, of Frederick; Tobias E. Zimmerman, Adamson.

Montgomery County—Oliver Hazard, Rockville; W. H. Carlin, Silver Spring, and S. Walter Bogley, Thomas W. Pyles and John L. Imirie of Bethesda.

Powerless to Act, Darden Informs Sanatorium Head

Richmond, Va., June 14 (AP).—Governor Darden said today that he had informed Dr. J. S. Dejarnette, superintendent of the Dejarnette State Sanatorium, that the Governor had no legal authority to review the recent charge brought by an Episcopal minister that the superintendent had ejected him from the institution.

The State Hospital Board at a recent meeting postponed action on the charge brought by the Rev. W. Carroll Brooke, that he was ejected from the sanatorium when he went to visit a parishoner. The postponement was taken at the request of Dr. Dejarnette, who said he wished the matter to be brought to the attention of the Governor.

The Governor said he had told the superintendent that no report of the case had been submitted to him by the hospital board.

Va. Plant Gets Award; Gov. Darden Speaks

Harrisonburg, Va., June 14 (AP).—Speaking at ceremonies incident to the presentation of the Office of Civilian Defense national security award to the Stonewall plant of Merck & Co. at Elkton, Governor Darden yesterday declared that this is one of the most decisive years in American history, and "we at home must bend every effort to see that there is no interruption in the supplies sent to our fighting men all over the world."

The award was received in behalf of the company by Dr. Edward J. Nolan, plant manager, from Col. Henry A. Reninger, acting regional director, Third Regional Defense.

Maryland Court Upholds Act Banning Ads by Medical Men

Annapolis, Md., June 14 (AP).—The Maryland Court of Appeals today upheld a 1943 legislative enactment prohibiting advertising in newspapers and over the radio by physicians and surgeons in an opinion filed by Judge Edward S. Delaplaine.

The law, which provided a penalty of a $50 to $300 fine or possible revocation of the physicians' license, was challenged in an appeal brought by Dr. William A. Davis of Baltimore City, who contended before the appellate bench in April that "the Legislature . . . has enacted a statute which is arbitrary and has no counterpart among the statutes in the United States."

The act's constitutionality had been contested by Dr. Davis in the Baltimore City Circuit Court which upheld the defense presented by the State Board of Medical Examiners. The board had argued that such a law was necessary to prevent indiscriminate advertising by members of the medical professional.

Dr. Davis, a graduate of the University of Maryland Medical School, had asserted before the court that after the 1943 act became effective his receipts "fell more than 50 per cent below those of previous years" because he was unable to advertise in the newspapers.

In reply to the complaint submitted by Dr. Davis that the restriction should not be limited to any one profession, Judge Delaplaine stated that "the complainant cannot object because the particular regulations imposed by the act of 1943 are limited to physicians and surgeons and is not extended to other professional classes.

"The State was not bound to deal alike with all these classes, or to strike at all evils at the same time or in the same way. It can deal with the different professions according to the needs of the public in relation to each," the opinion read.

Judge Delaplaine added that "the right to carry on any lawful business, trade or calling is subject to regulation by the Legislature and that body, in enacting this statute aimed to aid in maintaining the high standard of ethics of physicians and surgeons."

Fred Yeakley Rites Are Held

Winchester, Va., June 14 (AP).—Methodist services were held today for Fred G. Yeakley, 70-year-old Frederick County fruit grower and businessman who died Monday following an illnes. Interment was in Mount Herbon Cemetery. Survivors included his wife Mrs. Rose Janney Yeakley and one sister, Mrs. J. A. Richard, both of Winchester.

She is survived by her husband; one daughter, Miss Mary Hellen, a student at Goucher College, Baltimore; one son, William H. Hellen of Baltimore; two sisters and three brothers.

C. A. Fauver

Winchester, Va., June 14.—Funeral services were held today for Camillus A. Fauver, 60, businessman, who died Monday. For 15 years he managed an oil plant here, and until his death was a merchant and filling station operator. He was a member of the Methodist Church and the South End Fire Co. His wife and a daughter survive.

Young Democrats Asked To Cancel Convention

Charleston, W. Va., June 14 (AP).—State Mileage Rationing Administrator M. M. Maloney made public today a letter in which he requested the Young Democratic Clubs of West Virginia to call off the 1944 convention for reasons of wartime conservation.

In a letter to John B. Smith, member of the public service commission and secretary of the Democratic organization, Maloney explained that "the primary reason for this office making such request is to conserve gasoline, tires and motor vehicles that would be used in driving to the convention city."

Jap-American Labor Sought For Md. Hospital

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—State hospitals and other institutions may attempt to relieve a critical labor shortage by employing Japanese from relocation centers, State employment Commissioner Walter S. Owens said today.

Owens explained that he now is investigatingthe possibility of filling long-vacant positions of hospital and ward attendants, cooks, waiters and similar classifications with Japanese of proven loyalty. He said inquiry already has been made.

In a letter to Dr. J. Benson Saks, attorney for the War Relocation Authority, Owens also inquired about the obligation the State would assume in respect to employment of Japanese.

"I do not yet know," Owens said, "whether it will be possible or advisable to employ Japanese in these positions, but State institutions are desperately in need of help and we could assure those employed of fair and decent treatment.

Va. Town Votes to Keep Streets Clear of Cows

Wise, Va., June 14 (AP).—Cows were beaten off the streets with ballots here today.

They were voted off the town's streets by 134 to 84 votes in an election which was credited with holding more local attention than the polling for city officers, which included a mayoralty election.

Heretofore, they were allowed to graze at will.

Results Listed In Colorless City Elections

Virginians cast ballots lightly in city elections mainly distinguished for uneventfulness. While a large number of races for mayor, as well as other public offices, were uncontested, accounting for the marked apathy of voters, the sweltering weather was blamed in part. Results follow:

Winchester, with less than 150 votes cast, Dr. C. R. Anderson was elected mayor; Percy Miller, Dr. Allen Hawthorne, J. Thomas Kremer, A. Lee Coble, W. W. Dellinger and Sebert Smith, councilmen. None of the offices were contested. All are incumbent with exception of Smith, who will succeed W. P. Anderson.

Waynesboro—S. C. Heatwole, polling 186 votes to 119 for his opponent, A. A. Vastine Coyner, was elected East Ward councilman here in the only contest here.

Richmond—Cast 2799 votes to elect Capt. William C. Herbert as mayor. The voters elected 20 members of common council, six members of the board of aldermen, and Charles E. Maurice, unopposed for second assistant commonwealth's attorney.

Norfolk—Election of three members of the city council resulted in the reelection of the three incumbents. George R. Abbott and J. Rives Worsham, for four-year terms, and Dr. James W. Reed elected for a two-year interim period. Complete unofficial returns showed 6166 ballots cast.

Danville—W. E. Gardner, incumbent, was relected mayor by a plurality of 62 votes in a field of four, as the "independent" faction scored a three-to-one victory over the mayor's Good Government Club in the councilmanic contest. O. L. Roach, A. E. Garrett and H. E. Wilson, independents, and O. G. Fentress of the Good Government Club won seats in council.

Newport News—With a population of close to 60,000, cast only 570 votes for three unopposed Democratic candidates for city council.

Lynchburg—Mayor Richard A. Carrington, jr., Albert P. Lankford and Maurice B. Hickson, Democratic incumbents, were elected yesterday, when only 1305 voters cast ballots.

Colonial Beach—Mayor W. D. Williams, running for reelection, polled 372 votes, as again the 85 polled by James A. Meyers. Six councilmen, all incumbents, won reelection over seven other aspirants for office.

Norton—Voting set a new all-time low, when only 37 ballots were cast for Charlie E. Whitmire and G. C. McCall, incumbents, who were unopposed for two places on the town council.

Stafford Bank Holdup Foiled

Fredericksburg, Va., June 14 (AP). An unsuccessful attempt to rob the Peoples Bank of Stafford, 10 miles north of here, was made this morning by an unidentified white man who escaped on foot through the woods.

The bandit was described as about 45, having a "dirty appearance," and wearing a blue suit and straw hat. He carried an old-style revolver and his intended victim said the man was "obviously an amateur."

Alvin W. Biscoe, cashier, said the man entered the bank about 9:45 and approached the window with pointed gun and said, "This is a holdup!" Biscoe dodged behind a corner and ran out a sidedoor. He secured a shotgun, but the man had left on his return.

Only other person in the bank was Miss Olive Sullivan, clerk in the bank office, who was not molested.

State and county officers began a search of the countryside. Bloodhounds from the District of Columbia prison at Occoquan were obtained. FBI agents were participating in the hunt.

State to Open New 'VD' Center

Richmond, Va., June 14 (AP).—The Hampton Roads Medical Center at Norfolk will open tomorrow for the diagnosis, hospitalization and treatment of cases of communicable venereal diseases, Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said. The staff has been assigned to the hospital by the United States Public Health Service.

"Inasmuch as war emergency funds have been allotted under the Lanhan Act through FWA for maintenance and operation, the hospital will be considered first in connection with providing treatment and isolation for contacts named by armed force personnel who are found to be infected with a venereal disease in a contagious stage," Dr. Riggin said.

However, he explained the facilities also "will be used for the treatment and isolation of unmanageable cases of infectious venereal diseases which local health officers throughout Virginia under the law must isolate as public health menace."

Md. Amazon Battles Police And Firemen

Ferndale, Md., June 14 (AP).—It took four Ferndale station policemen, the Odenton fire department, and nearly two hours last night to take into custody on an assault warrant a woman living near Clark station.

The officers, headed by Lt. William C. Wade, said they were told at the door of the home by the woman's husband that their task might be difficult.

This, said the policemen, is what happened:

The woman, who was charged with assault and battery with a pitchfork on a 15-year-old girl, barricaded herself in the living room, then retired to a bedroom while police hacked at door panels.

When the officers broke the upper panels of the bedroom door, she smashed a large mirror and hurled dagger-sharp segments, then used a hatchet to cut bureau, chairs and a table into more ammunition.

A surprise attack through one window failed when a piece of furniture came hurtling through.

About that time, the Odenten fire department arrived. As the firemen and police dragged a hose up the front steps, the steps collapsed.

Then firemen got a ladder and made use of the hose, but the woman took one last fling, hurling a hatchet through a door space and striking a bystander.

Her husband, locked outside at the beginning, just watched.

Bosox Win Two, Half Game From Lead

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Y'know what:

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees is understandably unhappy about that seven-game losing streak and the loss of 13 of their last 15 ball games, but he isn't mad at his boys. He's the toughest taskmaster in the league, but he makes allowances, too. He knows the limits of his 1944 athletes.

POVICH

McCarthy has had more good ball teams than any other manager in the league but he isn't spoiled. He could get pretty furious when his good ball teams were beaten but this season he's sort of philosophic. If he gets 100 per cent performance out of his present Yankees, he knows it won't be good enough to win the pennant because they're short on ability.

The Yanks have won only four games since they left Yankee Stadium on May. 23. They've played 19, and haven't been back to the Stadium since. It's the worst road trip for a Yankee team in 20 years.

In the matter of home runs, the Yankees are having a new experience. For the first year since 1920, when Ruth joined the club, the Yankees are seeing more home runs hit against them than they are hitting themselves. Three times during their losing streak they've been licked by home runs hit by guys who were getting their first homers of the season.

Sammy Baugh is under contract with the Redskins for the next seven seasons despite the fact no announcement has been made. The Redskins' front office is supposedly awaiting a lull in the war news before announcing it's triumph of signing Baugh for this newest and longest term of years.

He has been under contract since January, as we hear it. He's about the only guy on the Redskins' whose job is secure. Baugh, like a lot of other players, has been outspoken about the Redskins' way of doing things. Other players have been traded away for the same kind of talk, but not Sammy. He's simply too valuable, however much he may not be admired by the front office.

The Redskins' new coach, Dud de Groot, isn't able to count on his players from day to day, incidentally. Talking before the Washington Sportswriters' Club last month, De Groot said: "I'm depending a whole lot on players like Bob Masterson and Ray Hare." Both of them have been traded off the club since.

It was no surprise whatsoever that the Red Sox led the bidding for Dick Callahan, the 19-year-old New Orleans high school pitcher, who was given a $15,000 bonus for signing a Boston contract. Aside from his pitching skill, which has netted him two no-hit games this season, young Callahan has another important asset in a 4-F card.

The Red Sox went high for Callahan for business reasons. If, perchance, he is a success in the big leagues, then, with a name like Callahan, he'll be a surefire favorite in Irish Boston. Even as the New York clubs used to seek Jewish ballplayers with avidity, the Boston teams strive to cater to the Irish patronage.

Detroit was supposedly solidly in the bidding for young Callahan. In fact, the Tigers had some sort of an agreement with the boy that they would top all other offers. That was typical of the rich Detroit club which landed Dick Wakefield for $55,000. But the Tigers may have cooled toward Callahan after their experience with Wakefield who took the $55,000 and went into the Army after one season.

Down through the years, Jack Dempsey has been pictured as the rod-riding hobo who won the championship of the world, a rough, tough kid who could hit hard and was otherwise of limited skill. Well, now we learn that Dempsey qualified as no less than the sculptor's ideal.

So says Lester Bromber, writing in the Police Gazette. He quotes the late Alfred W. McCann, famed health expert: "Dempsey's development comes closer to the sculptor's ideal than can be found once among a hundred million subjects elsewhere. And one is amazed by the pantherlike agility of the tremendous torso. One may also see in the muscular play of the back where the fibers converge and cross each other.

"Graceful even to the degree of beauty, it is difficult to associate any of the attributes of ferocity with the mold of this extraordinary person. But there is he to judge, an enigma and a contradiction, for one will not find in a generation this man's counterpart in directed fury."

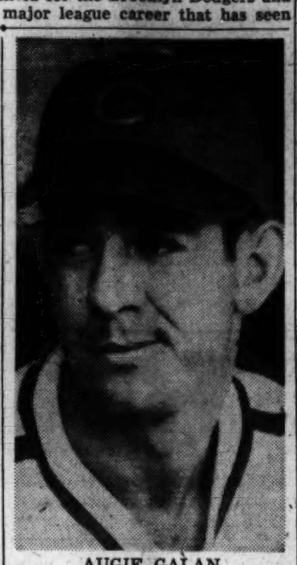
Galan's Aching Career:

'Breaks' Came Augie's Way—But He Overcame 'Em All

By Whitney Martin

New York, June 14 (AP).—For a guy who was all washed up three years ago and has been in hospitals so much visitors began to ask if he was part of the endowment, Augie Galan is doing quite well, thanks.

Right now he's playing in the outfield for the Brooklyn Dodgers and hitting around .326, the best of a major league career that has seen more bad breaks than a county fair harness race.



AUGIE GALAN

Augie has been smashed up, stove, up, spliced up and, as mentioned, washed up, and just for a little variety he adopted a case of typhoid fever when a stretch of fair health began to get monotonous. That little sideline nearly benched him for keeps.

The physical troubles of the 32-year-old Californian go back beyond his ball playing career. As a kid he parachuted 20 feet out of a tree, without a parachute, and landed on his right, or throwing elbow. Kidlike he kept the injury secret, with the result that, due to lack of corrective measures, he got stiff in the joint.

Now many citizens have got stiff in joints, with only a temporary hangover as a result, but Augie's type of hangover was pretty serious to a kid who liked to play baseball. He learned to throw using the shoulder muscles, and thus concealed his handicap, even after he had reached the big leagues.

His legs have taken the real beating, though. Augie is the kind of ball player who gives everything he's got to the game, with the result that he never stops for obstacles, and often gets hurt.

In 1937 he collided with Pinkie Whitney at first base, and Augie came out of that with torn muscles in his left knee. In 1938 he smashed head-on into Floyd Young of the Pirates, and again the left knee went to the hospital for repairs.

Those were just practice crackups, however. The real thing came July 31, 1940, when in one of his do-or-die efforts, he crashed against a wall at Philadelphia while chasing a fly ball. They toted him off the field with both knees the worse for wear. He had to undergo an operation to repair his broken left knee cap.

The Cubs, for whom he had played during all these misfortunes, decided he had outlived his usefulness after that, and in 1941 they got waivers on him and turned him out to pasture in Los Angeles. Augie had other ideas, however, and he declined to report, with the result that Larry acPMhail got him for the Dodgers in excange for Pitcher Mace Brown.

Since then Augie, who can play first base and second base in addition to the outfield, has been improving steadily, and right now he's one of the chief reasons why the Dodgers are in fifth place. They'd be lower without him.

So Augie, who holds a record for going through a 154-game season without hitting into a double play, has come back at last, and he didn't come on his knees. He came in spite of them.

Hildur Queen Wins by Head, Paying $9.20

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 14.—It was age before beauty in the finish of the Berkeley Purse, feature race of a revised program here this afternoon. Sam Slagel's Hildur Queen, a 10-year-old, hung a head defeat on Mrs. Dan Chamblin's Blablah, an 8-year-old, at the end of the test of about 4½ furlongs. L. S. Snyder's Meysah was third in the field of six.

The rains came to Charles Town today. After an absence of precipitation for the most part for some 10 days, the track was muddy and the featured sprint was one of two substitute races arranged this morning.

Hildur Queen, ridden by Jackey Bobby Edens, was clocked in :53 and with Blablah the favorite, the ancient mare returned a $9.20 mutuel.

Blablah broke in front, but was soon joined by Hildur Queen and the two battled it out from that point to the wire with the 10-year-old miss having an approaching-the-wire kick that Blablah could not resist. Meysah was always third.

There was a $157.40 payoff on the daily double. H. A. Besore's Air Defense, well handled by Jockey J. Hummer, surprised by taking the first event at a $22.60 mutuel. L. G. Blume's Daring took the second race at $14.60.

BETWEEN RACES—There has been more claiming at this meeting than in the 10 years of racing at this point. To date 21 horses have changed hands by this method and the transactions involved $21,100. The stewards issued the following ruling today: "Trainer A. J. Taylor and the horse British Warm are definitely suspended pending investigation into the case in which the horse was declared from yesterday's fifth race." Jockey Joe Tammaro, Baltimore rider, wired that he is coming here from Delaware Park to ride out the meeting. J. S. Latimer's Lit Up was shipped to Delaware Park. Lieut. C. T. Halloway's Big Steel broke down in a recent race and has been shipped back to the farm. There are 639 horses here. There is a 16-year-old horse, Crossed Wires, running at the Wheeling track. Jockey Willie Kelly was given a nice hand when he won the fourth race today with Chat Hopkins. It was his first winner since he returned to the saddle after serving overseas in the Army.

Ted Atkinson Rides Five Aqueduct Winners

Aqueduct Race Track, New York, June 14 (INS).—Jockey Ted Atkinson went on a winning spree here today with five winners out of seven mounts.

He started with Turnplate, at $10.60, in the first race, then scored on Magellan, $8, in the fourth; Burg-El-Arab, $3.10, in the sixth; Bric-a-Brac, $5.40, in the seventh, and Coat of Arms, $11.30, in the eighth.

Mexican Handicap Champ Eyes Rich U. S. Stakes

Capt. Patrick O'Hay with Gay Dalton.

By Theodore A. Ediger

Mexico City, June 14 (AP).—Gay Dalton, monarch of the Mexico City racetrack, is looking for new worlds to conquer.

The 4-year-old son of American Flag and Traumerette is returning to the United States after winning $42,000 this season for his owners, who bought him for $800 as a yearling.

The chestnut—one-horse stable of Capt. Patrick O'Hay, the soldier of fortune—is headed for Hollywood. But it's to crack the track at Hollywood Park, and not to pose for movie cameras.

And next year, says O'Hay, Gay Dalton is going East to run in some big races.

It was at Taos, N. M., that Dalton Denton, a filling station owner, and Gaylord Burt, light plant manager, bought their namesake.

"I talked them into it," laughs O'Hay. "They had never owned a thoroughbred in their lives. They did it more out of sympathy for me than anything else. I promised to train the horse for half its earnings. Later I became half owner."

Last year, when the Hipodromo de las Americas, Mexico City's million dollar track, opened, O'Hay brought the Kentucky-bred, New Mexico-foaled colt here. The horse won five firsts, two second and four fourths.

Won 7 Out Of 9

This season, Gay Dalton rapidly developed into the outstanding horse at the Hippodromo. With seven victories and one fourth in nine starts, he was a heavy favorite in the recent $25,000 added Handicap de las Americas, plum of the season's stakes.

Gay Dalton didn't disappoint his backers. Carrying 130 pounds topweight, he cakewalked in, 15 lengths ahead of the field and established a new mile and one-quarter track record at 2:05 1-5.

It was a great moment for O'Hay, a 61-year veteran with horses. Standing in front of the largest crowd ever to attend a horse race in Mexico City, the hardy veteran, who has held ranks in the armies of five nations, stroked his beautiful thoroughbred and wept for joy.

Runs To Win

After the race, some of the bettors criticized O'Hay.

"Should a' held back that pony," they said. "Won't be able to win any money on him the next race."

To which O'Hay replied:

"We don't run races that way. To hold back wouldn't be fair to Mel (Melvin Duhon of Kaplan, La., the jockey), and it wouldn't be good for Gay Dalton. Besides, Mel and I never bet."

A few weeks later in the $10,000 Handicap Presidencial, Gay Dalton, although assigned 136 pounds—heaviest weight ever carried at the Hipodromo—again was the heavy favorite.

The son of American Flag won by three lengths, the first victory for a 136-pound weighted horse since Discovery won the Brooklyn Handicap in 1936.

Macks Bow In Twin Bill, 6-4 and 5-0

Boston, June 14 (AP).—Boston's surging Red Sox extended their winning steak to eight straight today by taking both ends of a double bill from the Philadelphia Athletics, 6-4 and 5-0. Pinky Woods limited the Athletics to five hits while tossing the shueout.

The Red Sox gave Emmett O'Neal a two-run sendoff in the first inning of the opener but he blew up soon after and passed two batters with the bases laoded.

Before reliefer Francis (Red) Barrett, who joined the club from Columbus yesterday, coult retire the side in the second inning, the Athletics tallied a third run.

Barret gave a workmanlike pitching exhibition during the remainder of the opener and his teammates tallied in the fourth, fifth and eighth innings to make his Red Sox debut a tremendous success.

Woods fell into a deep hole as he started the nightcap but, after fiilling the bases, pitched himself out of it.

The Sockers, who made all of their runs against Starter Russ Christopher, scored twice in the first inning on two singles, a hit batter, a double steal and a fly.

George Metkovich, who went hitless in the opener after connecting safely in his previous 16 games, singled in two more Boston runs in the second and Bobby Doerr connected for his fifth homer in the fifth frame.

Cards Outlast Chicubs in Slugfest, 10-9

St. Louis, June 14 (AP).—Perseverance paid off for the champion St. Louis Cardinals who played it uphill virtually all the way today to shake off the pesky cellar-dwelling Chicago Cubs, 10 to 9.

It was a slugging match with neither club handcuffed for long. Errors in the form of wild throws were chipped in at crucial moments by both sides to add to the woes of the four Cub and three Cardinal pitchers.

Morton Cooper, the Cards' ace righthander, suffering a sore jaw from which a tooth was extracted only yesterday, failed to survive the second inning and was replaced by Brecheen with two out after the Cubs had scored a pair of runs in each the first and second innings on six hits, a hit batsman and a walk.

The Cards buckled down in the fourth, scoring twice, then went ahead for the first time in the fifth when they batted out Henry Wyse, Cubs' starting pitcher, and worked Hy Vandenberg for a walk and two hits to add four more runs.

From then on it was a succession of pitching and base running with the chances only for the team ahead at the right time. On that basis it looked good for the Cubs after they scored three runs in the eighth and led, 9 to 7, but it wasn't that kind of game, and the Cards turned it around in the same inning by chasing over three of their own.

Take Away Wins Lincoln Fields Top

Chicago, June 14 (AP).—Leo Nehring's Take Away won his third consecutive victory of the Lincoln Fields meeting here today by capturing the Buckingham Fountain Handicap by 4½ lengths. Happy Pilot was second and Topnard third, with the evenmoney favorite, Traffic Court, finishing fourth.

Take Away, a 4-year-old son of Aneroid, ridden by Willie Morrisey, took an immediate lead and won more or less as he pleased. The track was slow and the time 1:20 for 6½ furlongs.

Today's crowd of 13,036 had wagered $594,186 at the end of six races. Up to today the twenty-sixth day of a 29-day meeting, wagering had totaled $17,944,344.

4 Indians Named For All-Star Game

Cleveland, June 14 (AP).—Manager Lou Boudreau today named four Cleveland Indians on his 25-player roster nominated as an all-star American League team to meet a National League galaxy at Pittsburgh July 11.

Boudreau named Pitcher Mel Harder, Third Baseman Ken Keltner and Outfielders Oris Hockett and Roy Cullenbine. As usual he omitted his own name in the nominations, but teammates predicted the seven other managers in the league would vote the young shortstop-manager into his fifth straight all-star game.

The selections were sent to Joe McCarthy, manager of the World Champion New York Yankees, who will pilot the all-stars.

17,000 Slated To See Davis And Armstrong

New York, June 14 (AP).—Two of boxing's top-flight "knocker-outers"—Henry Armstrong of Los Angeles and Al (Bummy) Davis of Brooklyn—meet tomorrow night in a 10-rounder expected to entice 17,000 fans and $75,000 through Madison Square Garden's portals.

Armstrong, only battler ever to hold three world titles at the same time, and Davis, only man ever to flatten Bob Montgomery, holder of the New York version of the lightweight crown, are in the midst of comebacks.

Each has a kayo percentage of close to the .600 mark. Henry quit the ring after losing the last of his titles, but returned in June, 1942, to participate in 39 bouts. He scored 21 knockout victories, won 13 decisions and lost five verdicts over that route.

Davis, since getting a medical discharge from the Army, has had 25 bouts, winning 16 by knockouts and two via decision, along with two draws and five adverse rulings.

Oil in Yarn Ruining Balls, Says Hubbard

Chicago, June 14 (U.P.).—Cal Hubbard, veteran American League umpire, said today that many baseballs have been thrown out of games this year because of an overabundance of oil that soaks through the outer hide.

Hubbard said that in a recent game at Cleveland, he threw out 19 balls that were too oily for pitchers to control and that hardly a day goes by when one to a dozen balls aren't ruled out of the game.

Hubbard said that manufacturers have asserted that improperly treated yarn had caused oil to "sweat" through the cover.

Byron Nelson 4-1 Favorite in Red Cross Golf

By Fritz Howell

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 14 (AP). Although he finished sixth, 5 strokes over par and 15 strokes off Sam Byrd's winning pace, in last week's 72-hole test at Philadelphia, Byron Nelson of Toledo was installed today as a 4-1 favorite to cop the $13,333 Red Cross golf tourney starting tomorrow at Wykagyl.

The experts evidently expect "Lord Byron," generally the guy with the punch in a pinch, to rebound from what he described as the "worst golf I ever played."

Nelson came up with that statement after blowing himself to an 8-over-par 79 on the last lap of the $17,500 Quaker City Invitational.

Other hot-shots in the Wykagyl 72-hole four-day medal play jaunt are Byrd, the former ball player who fired a 10-under-par 274 to lead the Philly field of 129; Craig (No. 2) Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., duration National Open champion, who chased Byrd to the wire; Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Philadelphia, heavy money-winner on the winter tour, and some Army talent including Sergts. Vic Ghezzi and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison. The later, from the Ozarks, was third at Philadelphia.

Byrd and Wood are second in the wagering, at 5 to 1. Cop Paul (Little Poison) Runyan, former PGA champ, and Johnny Farrell, former National Open king, also are rated high among the talent.

The field, sprinkled with outstanding amateurs led by Ed Furgol, Detroit public links star, and Capt. Dick Chapman, former National Amateur winner, will play 18 holes each day, Thursday through Sunday. The leading professional will take down $2,666.65 in war bonds, with awards dwindling to $133.30 for twentieth place.

Amateurs landing in the prize list will receive $100 war bonds.

All-Star, Bear Game Slated August 30

Chicago, June 14 (AP).—The eleventh annual all-star football game between a select group of college players and the Chicago Bears, champions of the National Football League, will be played at Northwestern niUversity5s Dyche Stadium the night of August 30, Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, which sponsors the all-star classic, said today.

Profits of the game, which last year exceeded $66,000, will be divided betwee nthe Army Air Force aid society and the Chicago Servicemen's centers.

The Bears, who beat the Washington Redskins, 41-21, last December to regain the pro championship, will again train at St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, Wis. The collegians will prepare for the contest at Northwestern, their base since the series started in 1934. A staff of five coaches picked from various sections of the country will handle the collegians.

"Several collegiate conferences agai nhave approved the participation of undergraduates in the all star game," Ward said. "This, of course, is an emergency measure which will be discontinued after the war. There will be no balloting for players. A poll would be unfair to many of last year's headliners now in the service who might not be able to arrange a leave or furlough to participate in the game."

Ward said many of the top athletes of 1943 and 1942 have arranged to take their furloughs at all star game time and will be included on the roster.

Last year, the All-Stars, coached by a staff headed by Wisconsin's Harry Stuhldreher, whipped the Redskins, 27-7.

Boxers Win and Lose

Los Angeles, June 14 (AP).—While John Thomas, Los Angeles, was coasting to a unanimous 10-round decision over Harry Teaney of Cleveland last night, the box-office cashier was robbed of $15,000 by two armed bandits.

Indains Drop Pair to Tigers, 3-0 and 11-3

Cleveland, June 14 (AP).—Rufus Gentry's tight pitching and a powerful hitting onslaught gave Detroit a pair of victories over the Cleveland Indians today. The Tigers took the opener, 3 to 0, and the nightcap, 11 to 3.

Manager Lou Boudreau called on eight hurlers—three in the first game and five in the second—in an effort to halt Detroit.

Gentry, a right-hander, held the tribe to six scattered hits in the opener. Detroit scored an unearned run in the second frame and collected two additional markers in the sixth on three hits and a wild pitch.

With Cleveland leading 3 to 2, Detroit bunched three hits in the sixth inning of the night cap to score twice. The Tigers added three more runs in the seventh and four in the eighth. The Tigers amassed 16 hits in the second game.

Normandy French Thoroughbreds Excite Md. Bach

Somewhere in France, June 14 (AP).—Maj. Satnley Bach of Parkersville rd., Lexington, Ky., former University of Kentucky football star, gets more excited over French thoroughbred horses he sees on Normandy farms than he does over snipers who occasionally take potshots at him and his drive, Pvt. Russell Hutzel, Route 1, P. O. Box 401 NE. ave., Uniontown, Pa.

Bach is liaison officer and does a lot of driving about the countryside between units.

"I have seen some of the best-looking horses I ever saw," Bach said. "It reminds me of Kentucky to drive along the lanes and see thoroughbreds in the fields."

Bach worked with Warren Wright for a time after leaving school and learned to know good horse flesh when he sees it.

The Germans did not take the horses with them and, in fact, they left behind a good many fine artillery horses. Some of the Army's transportation problems are being solved by officers using these animals as saddle horses.

Goshen Looks Up as $40,000 Hambletonian Classic Nears

By Oscar Fraley

Goshen, N. Y., June 14 (U.P.).—Life is looking up tonight for this sleepy little village in the Catskills as the good farm folk prepare for the return in August of their beloved Corn Tassel Derby, the $40,000 Hambletonian trotting classic.

It has been two long years since the 3-year-old harness horses whipped their sulkies around the dusty, kite-shaped track and Goshen has missed them—and the annual influx of city slickers and country cousins.

Two rough years, too, for some of these folks. For that one day helped lift many a mortgage as the metropolitan masterminds came, saw and were out-slickered. These are hospitable people, but more money rolled into this little old town on Hambletonians Day than ever was carried out. And thus it was a sad blow last year when transportation problems shifted an dthe race to Empire City, in the shadow of New York's skyscrapers.

Back With Trimmings

But it's coming back this year to Bill Cane's good time track with all the old trimmings. Once again crowds of visitors will swarm through the little village square with its revolutionary war monument. And, just as before, the ladies of the local church will serve hot chicken dinners to shirtsleeved crowds perspiring in the big striped tent, with big mugs of steaming coffee shoved across the loaded tables, covered with gaily-patterned oil cloth. And the usual allotment of flies.

It will be a big day in Goshen, this nineteenth welcome home race which for four years alternated between Syracuse, N. Y., and Lexington, Ky., before settling down at Big Bill's raceway in 1930. Interest appears as great as ever and already all rooms have been reserved in the lone hotel. Even rooms in private homes are practically gone for the important day still two months away.

Three Probable Favorites

Talk of the crops is secondary to that of the trotters who will go to the post August 9. The local gentry have installed three as propable favorites in an expected field of 12. Yankee Maid, a filly owned by A. L. Derby of Wichita, Kans., rates the current choice at 3 to 1, followed by Eve's Boy, a 5 to 1 shot from the Stable of W. J. Michael, Bicyrus, Ohio, and Cane's Enac, quoted at 8 to 1.

The home folks, of course, are rooting for Big Bill's Enac. For Big Bill is the patron saint of the event—and the town. Cane is the man who built the Hambletonian from what compared with a tenth rate county fair into the Kentucky Derby of trotting. Only a handful of people were scattered through the open bleachers when they first ran the event in 1930, but in five years Bill put Goshen on the map and the race into the headlines.

That's why they'll be rooting for Cane's colt. And, incidentally, why Goshen is looking forward to its big day. With the chicken dinners, hot coffee, deep dish apple pie—and the flies. For what those farm folks reap on Hambletonian day, well, it won't be hay.

5TH WAR LOAN
Gallagher "Welcome, Mr. Burton. I see you have my new War Bonds with you."
Burton: "Right you are, Mr. Gallagher—double what you bought last time. That's the way to back this Fifth War Loan Drive, so we can soon say 'all's well'."
Any man with an eye to the future knows it's wise to buy more War Bonds now! And when it comes to choosing a whiskey, he knows it's also wise to ask for Gallagher & Burton's—and to keep on asking. Even though the Gallagher & Burton's plant has converted entirely to war production, there are some reserves left, and they're being supplied to dealers whenever possible.

Md. Revolver Title Shoot Slated Sunday

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—The Fifth Annual Marlyand Revolver and Pistol Championship contests will be held at Sparrows Point Sunday, with Warrant Officer C. A. (Smitty) Brown, USMC, rated the pre-tourney favorite among the 225 expected entries from the East and South.

Gerald F. Huesman, statistical officer, said that pistol experts from Maryland, Illinois, Missouri, New York, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, South Carolina and other Southern States, as well as the District of Columbia, were among those scheduled to participate.

Brown, the favorite, was ranked a master by the National Rifle Association and is considered a top performer in national pistol competitions. He was runnerup to Capt. Harry W. Reeves of the Marine Corps for the individual championship last year. Reeves now is in India.

About 40 women were listed to shoot in the match, among them Mildred McCarthy of New Haven, Conn., who holds an NRA master's rating, and Sharpshooters Alice Matthews of Philadelphia and Mary K. Platt of Baltimore.

Top contenders among the men included I. B. Hale of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Pfc. Henry H. Leland of the Parris Island Marine Base, Lieut. (j. g.) Charles W. Lipscomb of the Manhattan Beach Coast Guard Training Station, Merton Golden of Reading, Pa.; W. B. Kirkpatrick of Philadelphia, Leon Cool of Baltimore, George Little of Annapolis, and Dr. F. F. Sower of Fairmont, W. Va., each of whom holds a master

The Not-So-Divine Forms Encased in Shorts, Slacks Berated in Metrical Memo

SNORTS FOR SHORTS: From one of my poetic friends—Ray H. Everett, to be exact—comes a metrical memorandum on a cause worth crusading for . . . Anyone who has inwardly seethed—or outwardly snickered—at the sight of generously porportioned women in slacks and boney men in shorts will like his:

Summer Fashion Note

Who wrote "the human form, divine?"
He must have known some special line
For, in the rank and file, we see
But little of divinity.

With here a bone and there a pot
The average "form divine" is not!
Full many try but are unable
To emulate a Grant or Grable.

Fat femmes fatales arrayed in slacks
Are fitting subjects for the axe
But for guffaws and grins and snorts,
Give me the skinny guys in shorts!

STAR DUSTINGS: Many persons have wondered why General Marshall went to Virginia Military Institute instead of West Point. Representative Luther Johnson asked him about it not long ago. The answer: "My politics were wrong. My people were Democrats, living in Republican Pennsylvania. They, and I, knew it would be useless for me to try to get an appointment to the United States Military Academy." . . . With a deft command of English and quite a flair for the dramatic, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell is considered one of the best public speakers now in uniform. He receives more invitations to address audiences than any other general in Washington, except General Marshall. . . . At his gala dinner for the "cotton export kings" the other night, Maj. Burris C. Jackson, while introducing each of his 50 guests, happened to overlook one. She was a pretty Wac lieutenant, and somebody quickly called her to the host's attention. "I'm so glad," he said as he presented her with an eloquent speech, "that if my memory had to slip on anybody, it wasn't a general, a colonel, or a Congressman."

HERE AND THERE DEPT.: Shortest biography in the Congressional Directory belongs to Representative Short. It's less than a line; runs as follows: "Dewey Short, Republican of Galena, Mo." . . . A Washington boy stationed in Iceland recently wrote home as follows: "This is the coldest place you can imagine; fact is, it's so cold the inhabitants have to live elsewhere" . . . Latest clippings from Texas newspapers indicate that Senator O'Daniel is still insisting he won't be a Presidential candidate this year "under any conditions."

THAT "LINCOLN LOOK": Tall, angular Brig. Gen. Robert H. Dunlop of the Adjutant General's office is told continually that he looks like Lincoln . . . There's a marked resemblance, particularly in the eyes . . . First time the personable general heard it was from a lieutenant under him . . . The general had just made a speech at a commencement ceremony and, convinced that the only good speeches are short ones, his was just about as brief as the Gettysburg Address . . . The lieutenant rushed up afterward, congratulated his superior in overly glowing terms, then added, "You know, you look just like Lincoln. I thought of that during your entire speech" . . . The general's dark eyes twinkled. "Lincoln," he said, "was a very great man, but he certainly wasn't a handsome one; so if you're trying to bootlick me, that's not the way to do it."

NO WOMEN WANTED? War's worse with women in it, in the opinion of at least one marine hero, Maj. Martin F. Rockmore, who recently returned to his Manhattan home after 23 months in the South Pacific . . . In an interview just after he got back, he gravely declared that all women should stay a long way behind the fighting front. . . . "Presence of Women," he said, "destroys privacy of the men and puts annoying limitations on their movements." . . . I judge Major Rockmore was never wounded. If he had been, I've an idea nurses on the front lines would have looked pretty good to him . . . Dispatches from the Normandy beachheads seem to indicate women are more than welcome over there.

Red Cross Canteen Makes Radio Debut

Today will mark the opening of the Red Cross garden canteen's hour on the radio—a program that promises to be one of the featured entertainments of the summer season in Washington.

Scheduled to begin at 1 p. m., it will be broadcast from the neatly manicured garden back of the National Red Cross headquarters. Mrs. George A. Garrett, chairman of the D. C. chapter's volunteer special service, will be official hostess at the luncheon.

At Mrs. Garrett's table will be Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, who will appear on the radio program and will talk about his nephew, who is a prisoner of war in Germany; Marc Peter, former Minister of Switzerland and now representative for the International Red Cross, and Sergt. George Heski, an exchange prisoner recently returned from Germany.

Clapper Book Is Launched At Reception

By Peggy Preston

Many of those Washington friends who watched "Raymond Clapper Watching the World", were on hand yesterday for the party which gave an unofficial send-off to the book by that name scheduled to reach bookstalls July 1.

Diplomats, Supreme Court Justices, Senators, officials and scores of the late columnist's contemporaries in newspaper circles were in the gathering at the Statler where officials of McGraw-Hill Book Co., publishers of the book, were hosts.

Honor guest at the 5:30 to 7 p. m. affair was Mrs. Clapper, who compiled and edited "Raymond Clapper Watching the World." She put long months of effort into the book, which, through the medium of Mr. Clapper's columns, tells a running story of world history in the past decade.

Mrs. Clapper began it just ten days after his death on a Pacific assignment, completed it early in April. Also her handiwork is the biographical sketch in the book's opening pages.

British Ambassador Attends

Among those who came to salute the Clappers and their book were the British Ambassador and the Countess of Halifax, Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Robert Jackson, the Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. Loudon, the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, Senator Alben W. Barkley and Senator and Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney.

House Minority Leader Joseph Martin was there, along with Representative Clare Boothe Luce and other friends from the Hill who knew and respected the late Raymond Clapper.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land were in attendance, as were Mr. and Mrs. Byron Price, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Casey, Joseph E. Davies, Judge and Mrs. Homer Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. Paul McNutt, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Batt, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Donald Richburg, Mrs. Helen Moody, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, William Hassett, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman and Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rones.

Press Contingent There

To mention but a few who were there from press groups: Lowell Mellett, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Baukage, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Henie, Mrs. Frank Dennis, Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann and dozens more.

Following the reception Mrs. Clapper was hostess at a dinner honoring officials of McGraw-Hill. In the company were James S. Thompson, president, Mr. and Mrs. William Poole, William E. Larned, S. T. Henry, Paul Wooten and Miss Elizabeth McKee.

Miss Marion Hodges, New York; Miss Sue Coleman, Baltimore, and Miss Margaret Burke, Washington, were bridesmaids. Their gowns were the same as that of the maid of honor, caught at the hems with deep pink roses. Their bouquets were old-fashioned deep pink rosebuds in large white tulle collars. Their hats were green trimmed with matching roses.

Dr. Allen Walker was best man.

'Make It Do' Dress Review Will Be Held

A group of outstanding American designers have remodeled worn and discarded clothing for an exhibition of "remade clothes" by the American Women's Voluntary Services at their headquarters, 1520 Twenty-second st., Saturday, June 24, from 2:30 to 8 p. m. The clothes will be modeled by AWVS members and the review is open to the public.

AWVS is inaugurating a national clothes conservation program, with approval of WPB. Aims of the program are to teach women to make discarded garments into new and wearable clothes; to help the family budget by conserving materials; to enable women with small incomes to maintain standard of appearance, and to provide a war and postwar project with lasting appeal for women.

Designers who gave their talents to this cause proved their versatility, not only to create new styles but to re-create old clothes into costumes both practical and lovely.

To make the program available to Washington women the D. C. Unit of AWVS will follow up the review with lectures and a free training course in clothes conservation which will give instructions in the correct method of reclaiming and remaking old garments.

The Gentler Sex

The Fearmongers

Who are always hearing strange noises in the house at night and wondering if someone is trying to break in.

Who are nervous "about sleeping in Pullman berths because of something they have heard or read, or because the "times" are what they are.

Who whisper behind their hands to companions when some unconventionally dressed person appears in a restaurant, on a street car, or at a concert.

Who are always imagining someone (usually a dark foreign looking man) is staring at them or following them or trying to listen to their conversation.

Who think all department store customers who stand close to them are trying to open their handbags, or listening to their names and addresses with some dark plot in view.

Who think it enhances their feminine charm to be afraid of cows, storms, mashers, mice, "wolves," their own helplessness, and a presumably menacing future.

Who spoil the enjoyment of every restaurant meal by speculating about the health of the food handlers and the cleanliness of the kitchen.

Who triumphantly discover Communists in Government offices—or even in political or economic argument with friends and acquaintances.

Who suspect all the snooty well-to-do people they don't like of being Fascists.

Who ominously predict clothes rationing, travel rationing, less gasoline, less food, less fun and less freedom for everyone.

Who are certain an unprecedented period of inflation looms after the war and that nothing can be done to stop it.

Who shake their heads mournfully and talk of the "terrific" casualties we're going to have in the invasion of Europe.

Who are sure there is going to be "lots of trouble" after this war and who are looking forward (apparently with great zest) to the race riots, crime waves, unemployment and other disasters they predict.

Who seem to take comfort in reiterating that the coming political campaign is sure to be a "very bitter one."

Who have evolved the philosophy that everything is so uncertain there's nothing really "safe" you can do with your money except invest it in fur coats and diamond wrist watches.

Who parrot the warning that we may expect to be short on both food and clothes (even hungry and going around in rags, they imply) as soon as shipments start to the liberated nations of Europe.

Who imagine all fire bells and ambulance sirens are blackout warnings and who still insist we will have the "real thing" in an air raid before this war is over.

Who are greatly disturbed over what the Russians are likely to do when the war is won—and also over what tricks the British may be up to.

Who are "afraid" it will rain, that it will be an unusually hot summer and an unusually cold winter, that the war will last a lot longer than anybody thinks; who are "afraid to be in a house alone, or to walk the streets after dusk, or to buy a war bond because they might need the money for something else, or to meet the future without a hoarded supply of yesterday's goods, or to come to grips with an unfamiliar idea.

Who contribute in their thought and their conversation to the greatest evil a stalk in the world today—fear, and impede the development of the greatest hope of tomorrow—faith.

Scribes Hear of Radio 'Spies; Edith Gaylord Is Inaugurated

Women scribes covered their typewriters and put on their best bibs and tuckers to attend the inauguration dinner for new officers of the Women's National Press Club at the Statler Hotel last evening.

The First Lady, a member of the club, gave a brief off-the-record speech and George Sterling, chief of radio intelligence division of the Federal Communications Commission, discussed radio espionage.

"Radio spies and transmitters heretofore kept under cover by RID surveillance may be designated by Berlin", declared Mr. Sterling, "especially as the Nazis are being pushed to the wall. In the past four and a half years, RID has located 380 clandestine stations within the United States and territories. However, very few of them involved espionage activity.

Espionage Cases Described

Voicing pride in RID's record in keeping espionage transmission in this country almost to zero, the speaker described in detail espionage and other clandestine cases cracked by the organization in this country and Latin America.

A little-known phase of RID's work is running down thousands of complaints of radio interference each year. This interference is caused by such devices as phonograph oscillators, diathermy machines, drawbridges, vacuum tube bombarders, neon signs, X-ray machines and high voltage lines, according to Mr. Sterling.

One highlight of the party was installation of officers.

Gridley, Gridiron Club president; Roy G. Blough, director of the division of tax research of the Treasury Department, and Mrs. Blough; Michael J. McDermott, special assistant to the Secretary of State, and Mrs. McDermott, and other notables.

Mildew Can Be Banished By New Wonder Chemical

By Martha Ellyn

Mildew blues are sung by many a Washingtonian. But now this plaintive chant may be banished. An effective war-born weapon has come to the rescue of the homemaker. It's a chemical discovery in concentrated liquid form that kills mildew and prevents its growth.

Martha Ellyn

Mildew can grow anywhere from 32 to 141 degrees. Although the growth is stopped by temperatures beyond these, the mildew may stay alive. Mildew needs only reasonable humidity — not saturation. If the weather is dry, these fungi will remain dormant for years. As soon as the air becomes moist, they will flourish and reproduce. Now comes the good news that such growth can be arrested.

Colorless, with a pleasant pine odor, this preventative may be wiped or sprayed on without damage to surface or fabric. It will not injure clothes or leather, nor affect dyes or hurt the skin. It will not harm anything on which plain water can be used.

Used on Any Farbic

Mildew stains are in reality, dyes of a variety of colors, caused by the fungus itself. Mildew leaves a very fast dye that ordinarily cannot be removed except by the use of bleaches so strong they weaken the fiber of the fabric. So, like moth prevention, mildew must be controlled before it does its damage. Up until this preventative was discovered, methods only delayed the growth but did not kill the fungus or prevent its return.

The mildew router may be used anywhere inside the home. It will protect shoes, leather of all kinds, luggage, clothing, laundry, closets, basements, attics, walls, floors, rugs and upholstery. Because it is highly concentrated, it is economical. One bottle may be diluted to make gallons of mildew-proofing material. It may be applied by brushing, spraying, daubing or dipping, depending upon the surface to be treated.

Large areas, such as floors and walls, should be sprayed. An ordinary spray gun may be used to apply it to clothes, curtains, upholstery fabrics, slip covers and other home furnishings. Smaller surfaces such as shoes, luggage and books may be wiped with a cloth saturated in a diluted solution.

Wash-Day Rainbow

Cheering news for the home laundress! No more belongings blighted with mildew. If you sprinkle clothes, then get your ironing plans upset, you need not worry. Simply add a little of the mildew-killer to the water when you sprinkle the laundry. Even if the items are left for several days before ironing, they won't mildew. Double insurance may be given to laundry if the mildew-killer is used in the final rinse water of the washing. You may also add it to starch without concern.

This time of the year is ideal for mildew growth. Whenever there is dampness there is mildew. Don't let it start moving in on you. If you plan to be away for a while and the house is to be closed, by all means give it a good dousing before you turn the key in the lock.

That musty smell that comes with closed rooms—and some open rooms—may be banished with this chemical. Or perhaps you have found your rugs mildewing on the floor. This can't happen again if you take this precaution. This material is available in two sizes—a pint for 85 cents and a quart for $1.59.

MILDEW GETS AROUND, so don't let it ruin clothes and household furnishings in these war days, when conservation of material and time is vital. Science has again come to the homemaker's rescue with the discovery of a chemical that will kill this fungus growth and prevent its return

Dutch Minister Makes Speech At Launching

The Dutch Minister, Baron Van Boetzelaer and Baroness Van Boetzelaer are on their way back to Washington from Jacksonville, Fla., where they went for the launching of the Liberty ship, Hendrik Willem Van Loon, which took place last night at the St. John's Shipbuilding Co. yard.

Baron Van Boetzelaer delivered a brief speech at the launching emphasizing that it was especially appropriate that the ship be named for the Dutch-American writer since he was one of our most consistent champions for liberty.

"A kind of literary Robin Hood," said Baron Van Boetzelaer, "he took a special delight in unseating privilege and overriding taboos. He was one of the first in this country to recognize Hitler as the arch-fiend, the sinister enemy of civilization, past, present and future. He hurled one book after another in the face of fascism with titanic strength and fury.

"He went down still fighting and I am glad that this ship will carry on the good fight. May it do its share in liberating the downtrodden, unhappy people who look to America for deliverance. I wish that Hendrik Willem Van Loon could have lived long enough to see that deliverance."

Wreco Dissolution Plan Filed With SEC

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Bank Dividend Voted

Directors of the Union Trust Co., Washington, have declared a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent or $1.50 a share on capital stock, payable July 15 to stockholders of record June 30. A similar dividend was voted for the first six months.

CLU Chapter Elects

The District of Columbia Chapter, American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters, has elected the following officers: President, T. Leehi O'Brien; vice president, Earle W. Sapp; program chairman, George L. Haines, and secretary-treasurer, Charles W. O'Donnell.

New Advertising Head

Arthur W. Kohler, manager of the Saturday Evening Post, announced yesterday the appointment of Glenn Gundell as advertising and promotion manager. Mr. Gundell formerly was in charge of advertising and sales promotion of the appliance and merchandise department of the General Electric Co.

Hanger Shortage Relieved

Relief from the famine of metal coat hangers is in sight.

The War Production Board released materials yesterday virtually doubling the current output of the wire conveniences. The increased allocation of iron and steel will provide materials for aproximately 47 million hangers in the present quarter, 20 million more than originally scheduled.

Parent Holding Firm Of Capital Transit, Pepco to Retire

By S. Oliver Goodman

Dissolution of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and two of its subsidiaries is proposed in a simplification plan filed yesterday by the 52-year-old holding company with Securities and Exchange Commission.

The two subsidiaries which would be dissolved are the Washington & Rockville Railway Co. of Montgomery County, Md., and the Great Falls (Va.) Power Co.

Will Retire Securities

Under the simplification plan, these steps would be taken:

Braddock Light & Power Co., Inc., operating in Virginia, would become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Potomac Electric Power Co. The latter at present is a direct subsidiary of Washington Railway & Electric Co. (Wreco).

After the elimination of Wreco, Potomac Electric and Capital Transit Co. would be direct subsidiaries of the North American Co., parent of the system.

Wreco would redeem $6,858,900, principal amount of its consolidated mortgage 4 per cent bonds due 1951, of which $3,720,500 has been assumed by Capital Transit. Potomac Electric would redeem $7,000,000 in outstanding 5½ per cent and 6 per cent cumulative preferred stocks.

The simplification plan will be considered by the SEC at a hearing July 18.

Will File With PUC

Alfred G. Neal, president of Wreco, said last night that in addition to SEC approval, certain aspects of the plan must be approved by the Public Utilities Commission.

"Because of the necessity of these and other legal proceedings," Mr. Neal stated, "no forecast can be made at this time as to when the plan may become effective."

The corporate simplification, he added, is necessary to meet the requirements of the Public Utility Holding Company Act. In 1942, the SEC under Section 11 of the Holding Company Act directed Wreco and the Washington & Rockville Railroad Co. to divest themselves of their interests in certain subsidiaries.

Mr. Neal said that directors believe the plan submitted yesterday meets the objectives of the Holding Company Act and 'is fair and equitable to preferred and common stockholders.'

At present, North American has 34.5 per cent of the voting stock of Wreco which, in turn, owns 100 per cent of the common stock of the Potomac Electric and 50 per cent of the common stock of Capital Transit.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 14 (AP).—Reaction to a wave of short covering set off yesterday by reports of rust damage to southwestern wheat was apparent in the grain pits today. Buying interest lagged and all futures averaged lower at the close. Market analysts said many shorts had evened up their positions and were slow to press the selling side because of uncertainty as to how severe the damage may be.

Wheat closed ⅛ higher to ⅜ lower than yesterday, July, 1.18. Oats were ¼ higher to ⅜ lower, July, 74⅛. Rye was unchanged to ⅜ lower, July, 1.07½. Barley was off ¼ to ⅝, July, 1.17⅜.
